Israel Invades After Shelling Along Frontier

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Well informed Israeli military sources said tonight Israeli troops had reached the outskirts of Damascus.

(Times News Services)

TEL AVIV—Israeli forces struck into Syria today and seized high ground overlooking the Sea of Galilee after charging the Syrians violated the ceasefire with a mortar barrage.

All fighting ceased on the main front along the Suez Canal after an Israeli army spokesman said Egyptians attacked east of the Suez Canal in the "central axis" and were repulsed. This presumably was in the area of Ismailia, Egyptian part in the centre of the canal.

Syria and Egypt, the last of the Arab combatants, accepted Thursday a UN Security Council demand for a ceasefire. Jordan, the third main Arab partner in the conflict, had dropped out of the war Wednesday.

Associated Press correspondent Hans Benedict, in the general area, saw the heavy artillery duel which broke the shaky ceasefire on the Syrian frontier this morning.

He said Syrian mortars in mid-morning opened fire on Israeli hilltop positions 20 miles north of the town of Tiberias, hours after Syria had announced acceptance of the ceasefire. The Israelis struck back and called in air attacks.

Radio Damascus, monitored in Israel, accused the Israelis of opening fire with artillery and aircraft and said: "We shelled their border settlements, demolished nine of their tanks, shot down one Mirage jet and destroyed a column of armor invading us."

JORDAN SAYS 15,000 DEAD IN FOUR DAYS

AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan said tonight 15,000 civilians and troops were kiled in the four-day war with Israel.

Foreign correspondents were called to Amman military hospital to see civilians and military personnel alleged to be suffering wounds caused by napalm dropped from Israeli planes.

A doctor said the Lutheran-run Augusta Victorio Hospital in Jerusalem and a hospital in Amman were hit by Israeli bombs.

He also said Israelis strafed a field hospital convoy as it returned to Amman and prevented it from picking up some 200 wounded on the way.

'Raise White Flags Over Homes'

The Arab language Jerusalem (Israeli) radio called on the population of Syria to raise white flags over their homes, "keep away from Syrian soldiers and vehicles and overthrow" the leftwing socialist Baath ruling party in Damascus.

Israel considers Syria's present leaders who seized power in a 1966 coup as ultranationalists who have no understanding of the outside world and directly responsible for the current Mideast war.

Damascus radio interspersed its broadcasts with communique after communique claiming "heavy human and material losses" by the invading Israeli armies and exhorting the Syrians to fight on.

Syrian head-of-state Dr. Houreddin Attassi called on the Syrian people "to fight until death in the face of the foreign aggressors." He urged his people to "turn the world into an inferno in the face of the aggressors."

Speaking in an emotion-packed voice over Damascus radio, Attassi said the Syrian people are facing "a vile Anglo-American-Israeli plot to wipe out the gains of our people."

Attassi said the existence of the Arab world is endangered by "imperialist aggression" and urged Syrian soldiers "to turn . . . Syrian soil into a graveyard for the aggressors."

Damascus radio announced that Syrian forces downed an Israeli plane over Damascus.

Thant Confirms Damascus Raids

At the United Nations Secretary-General Thant informed the Security Council that Israeli planes attacked Damascus and bombed, strafed and napalmed other targets in Syrian territory.

Quoting intelligence received at 12:30 p.m. EDT from Lt. Gen. Odd Bull of Norway, chief of the UN Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO) in Palestine, Thant said that "at 1401 hours, Greenwich Mean Time (10:01 A.M. EDT), Damascus was having an air raid."

Thant gave the council a running series of reports on military developments, starting with a bulletin he received at 7:14 a.m. EDT that Syria reported "in spite of our acceptance of the cease-fire, we are being subjected to an Israeli attack along the whole length of

NASSER
. . . admits defeat

Accepts Total Blame

CAIRO (UPI)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser, his armed forces crushed in a lightning war with Israel, resigned tonight as president of the United Arab Republic. He told the nation he was assuming full responsibility for the "grave setback" suffered on the battlefield.

Also resigning with Nasser was his first vice-president and deputy commander of the U.A.R. armed forces, Marshal Abdel Hakim Amer.

Within minutes after Nasser's announcement on a nationwide television broadcast, demonstrations broke out all over blacked-out Cairo.

"We want Nasser . . . we want Nasser," the crowds shouted, calling on the 49-year-old strongman not to resign.

Men and women alike wept in the streets as they heard of the resignation of the man who was the most powerful and controversial Arab leader in modern history.

TOOK OVER IN '54

Nasser, who came to power in a 1954 coup, suggested in his dramatic speech that U.A.R. vice-president Zakaria Mohieddin replace him in the presidency.

Nasser, looking haggard, repeated his charges that the United States and Britain actively aided Israel in the Middle East war and claimed there was "no doubt" that aircraft from U.S. and British carriers in the Mediterranean had taken part.

"We had expected to be hit from the south and east," Nasser said, "but we were hit from the west."

(Both the United States and Britain have categorically denied Nasser's charges. The Israel defence ministry Thursday night said it had intercepted a phone conversation in which Nasser arranged to invent the charge of U.S. and British assistance to salvage his prestige. See story page 3.)

'GRAVE SETBACK'

Nasser, whose government accepted a UN cease-fire Thursday after a last ditch series of tank battles with the Israelis, near the Suez Canal, said he "could not hide the fact that Egypt had suffered a grave setback."

The Egyptian leader added:

Syria, Israel Accept New Ceasefire Demand

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant told the United Nations Security Council today that Syria and Israel have both told him that they accept the council's ceasefire resolution passed earlier.

Israel's acceptance, however, contained the stipulation that Syria must accept and implement the ceasefire.

The reports were conveyed to Thant by the Israeli and Syrian ambassadors, Gideon Rafael and Georre Tomeh, respectively.

Tomeh had announced his country's acceptance earlier but he said attacks on Syria continued.

Tomeh said his foreign minister told him by telephone from Damascus that Israeli attacks "are increasing in their intensity and gravity by the minute."

He said he was told that Israeli planes are still bombing Damascus, Israeli paratroops had landed 20 miles inside Syrian territory and Israeli armored columns are on their way to join them.

The council also finally accepted a proposal put forward by Canada's George Ignatieff Wednesday that the UN make an active effort to win full compliance with the ceasefire.

Ignatieff made his proposal after the Security Council passed the second of two resolutions calling for a ceasefire on all Israeli-Arab borders.

On the Canadian proposal a Canadian source told reporters: "We can't have Thant just sitting here receiving cables."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg told the council it should have acted on Ignatieff's proposal two days ago when it was made.

"It is high time we utilized the resources of this organization to get this war stopped," he said.

Soviet Ambassador Nicolai Fedorenko interpreted the council's decision on the new resolution as "a new condemnation of Israeli aggression."

NEW TWIST

Pearson Urges UN Peace Force With Buffer Zone

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said today his suggestion that a United Nations force be interposed between Israelis and Arabs is a matter to be decided by the Security Council.

The UN Emergency Force was disbanded when the United Arab Republic asked for its withdrawal before fighting broke out with Israel this week, Mr. Pearson noted.

Whether it would be reconstituted or the UN would decide to expand its truce supervisory organization, still in being in the area, would remain a decision for the council.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who said a "satisfactory conclusion" of the Middle East fighting had been reached with most parties accepting the UN call for a ceasefire.

He asked what the situation is on a new UN peacekeeping force and whether Canada had offered to the UN the services of a mobile peacekeeping force.

HAS BEEN NO APPROACH

Mr. Pearson said no request had been made by the UN for such a force. He noted Canadian officers already serve on the truce supervisory organization.

Mr. Pearson Thursday had renewed his request that a United Nations force be interposed between warring Israel and the Arab states and added a new twist — a demilitarized zone as a buffer area between them.

The prime minister warned, however, that such a suggestion is only a temporary measure in resolving Arab-Israeli hostility.

With the United States committed to Israel's cause and Russia to that of the Arab states, any new conflict in the area carries the inherent danger of a head-on collision between the world's two major powers, he added.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker sought the special Middle East debate. It was arranged by jumping the 1967-68 spending estimates of the external affairs department ahead of other departments.

HITS FENCE STAND

Speaking after Mr. Pearson, the Conservative leader blistered the government for "trying diplomatically to be in agreement with both sides" in the dispute.

In almost the same breath he said Canada no longer is regarded "as a nation without a national interest, unbiased towards one side or the other."

And he made it clear that he found favor with the Israeli cause, quoting President Nas-

MONDAY SET

Holiday For July 1 Confirmed

See Story Page 32

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians were assured today of a day off for the July 1 holiday, but were left in doubt about the official name.

Is it Confederation Day or Dominion Day?

Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons the cabinet has proclaimed Monday July 3 as a public holiday because July 1 falls on Saturday, another day off for many Canadians.

The prime minister called it Confederation Day. Conservative Leader Diefenbaker asked sharply whether the cabinet had authorized also a change in name from Dominion Day.

Mr. Pearson did not reply and Mr. Diefenbaker later returned to the point, saying the statutes label July 1 Dominion Day.

Was the government "chiselling away" at Canada's heritage?

DIRTY WORD?

"I really can't answer such a picayune, chiselling question," Mr. Pearson replied.

"Is Dominion Day a dirty word now?" Mr. Diefenbaker retorted. There was no answer from the prime minister.

A formal announcement from the prime minister's office said the July 3 holiday was to mark "the centennial observance of Confederation Day," but did not elaborate.

July 1 is the 100th anniversary of Confederation.

A bill introduced by Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre) led to the exchange on names. The bill proposed that the name—whatever it is—be changed to Canada Day.

It also proposed that it be celebrated as it now is on July 1 except when that date is a Sunday. And in any year that July 1 falls on a Saturday, the following Monday would be set aside as the day off.

WRECKAGE IN THE DESERT . . . . . . TESTIMONY OF ISRAELI VICTORY

'Mopping Them Up With as Little Blood as Possible'

By CHARLES TAYLOR
Toronto Globe and Mail

TEL AVIV — Inside the border of the Gaza Strip abandoned observation towers are mute witnesses to the failure of Canadian and other members of the United Nations Emergency Force to keep peace between Israel and Egypt.

In a wide swath through the strip itself abandoned hulks of Egyptian tanks and trucks are fresher witnesses to the incredible and irresistible surge of the Israeli military spearhead at the start of hostilities this week.

I travelled in the wake of the Israeli surge through the entire strip and further into Egypt. Everywhere victorious Israeli soldiers cheered and waved at the first foreign newsmen to record their remarkable exploit.

They swept through the strip in 36 hours, leaving sandy dunes littered with burned, smashed wrecks of Egyptian tanks, halftracks and trucks. Roads are covered with more wrecks, spent and live shells and bullets.

Past the strip and further inside Egypt heavy black smoke was rising from the town of El Arish as Israeli mortars were still lobbing shells into the town from its perimeter.

The Israeli offensive swept past El Arish leaving pockets of several hundred Egyptian snipers and other resisters. Said an Israeli colonel, "we're trying to mop them up with as much sweat and as little blood as possible."

Meanwhile the roads are choked with long convoys taking soldiers, guns and supplies farther into Egypt. Symbolically Israeli troops in trucks are munching large wheaten wafers called matzoth, which Jews eat at passover in memory of their exodus from Egypt 3,500 years ago.

"To Cairo, to Cairo," some shouted. Grimy and exultant they were all rejoicing in a victory as decisive as the Israeli surge into Sinai along the same route 11 years ago.

As they swept on they passed along truck columns bearing thousands of dejected forlorn Egyptian and Palestine liberation army captives.

At El Arish a young Israeli infantry captain said the Egyptians and Palestinians fought well and hard for the first hour or two. "Some even fought to the last minute but most turned and ran. It was disgusting. As always they left their guns and even their shoes," he added, pointing to piles of shoes.

Not only their shoes. While some Egyptian tanks were burned to a crisp others, dug into emplacements, were abandoned intact, nets still covering their unused cannon. The Egyptians also abandoned soft drink cans taken from withdrawing UNEF troops which they had no time to drink. Israeli troops were guzzling these drinks as they surged further into Egypt.

Other testimony to the rapid Israeli advance can be seen in the deserted huts crudely made of branches with pathetic white flags. Their Bedouin occupants had fled into the desert. Only here and

APPEAL TO BOTH CAMPS

NDP Starts Playing 'Third Man Theme'

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

The New Democratic Party convention last week involved much more than a leadership race and that's why there still is talk of another round next year.

Mika

True, Robert Strachan has personal enemies and friends who care whether he remains or is replaced at the helm but the real question agitating the party is a philosophical one.

Both Mr. Strachan and his challenger Tom Berger are sailing for that bright horizon which seems to promise power at long last to the province's left wing.

But some party members insist that the race is the thing and not victory and no matter whether contrary winds or doldrums overtake them, they will not turn on the engine even if they see their opponents do so.

Mr. Strachan is a symbol for this group which is composed largely, but not entirely, of nostalgic CCFers.

Mr. Berger is the symbol of the Young Turks who say there's nothing wrong with using the engine in a crooked sailing race and to them it is organization and not ideology that is the most important ingredient of a party.

●

Their own words appealing for convention support outline the difference of approach.

British Columbians "want a party which will never sacrifice principle for short-term gain," said Mr. Strachan. "A leader must not be ashamed of being a democratic socialist. A leader must not be all things to all men."

Mr. Berger argued that the traditional frontlines of the class struggle "have become blurred" because they include conditions such as pollution as well as poverty.

"It would have been easy for me to whistle up the old cliches and slogans," he said. But "this is more than a movement of social protest," it is a political party that must face up to the acid tests of the all-consuming drive for power.

"Things don't just happen in this world, you have to go out and make them happen. We can't allow victory to elude us. We have to manufacture it."

And so they polarized the internal conflict that the party has been consciously and unconsciously trying to stifle since the NDP was formed out of the old CCF and the militant wing of the labor movement back in 1961.

Reconfirmation of Mr. Strachan as leader by a 63 per cent majority of delegates doesn't resolve the issue because the leadership contest was an artificial clash of proxy symbols.

●

Undoubtedly, there were delegates who believed in socialist ideology but voted against Mr. Strachan for the usual reasons that weigh against any man who has led an opposition party for 11 long years. And there were "with it" organization delegates who voted against Mr. Berger because they suspected his Liberal background (he was vice-president of the Young Liberals before joining the CCF) or because of his poorly organized campaign.

It also is questionable whether the delegates were an accurate reflection or cross-section of the party which has undergone a tremendous growth in the past six months.

There apparently were close to 3,000 party members (about one-third) who joined too late to have any say in selecting the officers of the various constituency and other clubs who influenced the actual choices of delegates. And by the next convention, if the predictions prove right, there will be another 3,000 new party members but these will have had some say in the composition of the convention.

For this reason, some of Mr. Berger's supporters regard 1968 as a new ball game.

It may be but Mr. Berger picked up a couple of bruises and sprains in last week's encounter that could very well keep him crippled politically for some time.

●

Despite all his emphasis on organization, his own campaign was revealed as disastrously premature and poorly organized and even his seconder Grant MacNeil and most vocal booster MLA Frank Calder were resoundingly dumped from the party executive by Mr. Strachan's slate. Randolph Harding, his nominator and dean of the NDP caucus, was the only one to suffer the indignity of a heckle during the contest speeches.

Mr. Berger's effort only managed to reveal the party split and add to his list of defeats, which outnumber his victories — hardly a recommendation for leadership.

For Mr. Strachan the next year is make or break and the odds certainly are against him although they are not impossible to overcome. He can't wait until the next general election to prove that he's the party's best choice.

His one great advantage is that the most spectacular split is in the caucus — the legislative wing of the party — and that happens to be the area of his greatest interest and capability. If he can demonstrate successfully that the caucus has re-united solidly behind him, he will not face another challenge at the next convention.

It's a mighty big if.

The most likely prospect now is that the party will turn to a third man who can appeal to both camps for enthusiastic support. And that search already has begun.

. . . BLOOD

there a few camp fires and tethered camels revealed the presence of Arabs who stubbornly stayed behind.

In capsule form El Arish airport showed one major reason for the swift Israeli success. As with other Egyptian, Syrian, Jordanian and Iraqi air fields, this one was bombed early and effectively put out of action.

Gaping holes, hanger roofs and charred wrecks of Soviet MiG 21s on the strip showed the effectiveness of the Israeli bombers, while Israeli troops guarded Egyptian pilots and mechanics who had no chance to get their planes into the air.

Despite the infectious jubilation of the Israeli soldiers, it was impossible for any Canadian to leave the Gaza Strip without one main memory—those burned-out tanks, those abandoned huts, those downcast prisoners—all evidence of a war which Canadian and other UN troops helped to prevent for 11 years only to meet ultimate failure.

Charred and ravaged, the Gaza Strip today is the grimmest possible evidence of the first major setback for UN peacekeeping efforts and it offers scant hope for the future.

HUE AGAIN

Mortars Rake U.S. Compound

SAIGON (AP) — Communist gunners have raked the ancient city of Hue with mortar barrages for the second time in 10 days, killing one American. Three South Vietnamese soldiers were wounded in the shelling Thursday night.

The ground war in South Vietnam lapsed back into relative quiet, and heavy weather over the Hanoi-Haiphong area limited American pilots to strikes on supply lines. One air force Phantom was shot down and the two airmen are missing.

It was the 576th U.S. plane reported downed over the North.

The mortar barrage against Hue hit the U.S. compound, a nearby South Vietnamese district military headquarters and civilian homes. Fifty rounds hit the American compound.

All air strikes in North Vietnam Thursday were on road, rail and river traffic. The air force reported destroying 35 trucks and damaging at least 13 more—the best one-day total against road traffic in four months.

In Quang Tin province a company of about 150 guerrillas invaded a village, killing the village school teacher, wounding eight civilians and kidnapping 13.

In nearby Quang Ngai Province 13 civilians were wounded in a mortar attack directed at a U.S. headquarters.

The U.S. command announced that a total of 1,108 fixed-wing planes and helicopters have been lost in combat in the war.

HUMAN TORCH TAUGHT

'Torture School' For Red Guards

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet correspondent says a Chinese torture chamber holds Peking in a state of terror and aids the Red Guards in their defence of Mao Tse-tung's ideas.

The reporter says there is a special school for torture in Peking that trains Red Guards in the new science of "re-education."

Torture methods taught at the school include "jump without parachute," and "human torch," as well as hunger, thirst, and exploitation of the fear of death, he writes.

The story was spread over nearly a full page of Literaturnaya Gazeta-Literary Gazette—Wednesday and carried the headline, Blood on the School Wall.

The writer, identified only as V. Georgiev, says most of his information came from wall posters in Peking.

"Dozens of people have passed through the torture chamber, more than 50 of them have been tortured to death or crippled," he writes.

DROPPED ON CONCRETE

Georgiev describes at length the exact methods used. He said the "jump without parachute" consisted of a platform from which victim was dropped several feet to a concrete slab.

"Experienced tutors provided the Red Guards with all necessities, beginning with pocket knives to cut tendons and including silver needles which they put under the fingernails of their victims."

He describes how a teacher of the Russian language, one Van Minh-hu, was beaten unconscious, dragged into a courtyard, doused with gasoline and set afire.

CANADIAN Peter Worthington, Cairo correspondent for Toronto Telegram, was mauled by a mob of Egyptians in Cairo railway station when mistaken for an Israeli prisoner of war. He and compaion Don McGillivray of Southam News Service were rescued by other Egyptians from the mob.

'RADAR BLIP STARTED BATTLE'

Israelis Give Their Version

LONDON (UPI) — The Israeli ambassador today spelled out in detail the Israeli version of how the Middle East war started Monday. He blamed Egypt.

Ambassador Aharon Remez in a letter to the Daily Guardian protested "distortions" in the newspaper's account of remarks he made to a private meeting of the Anglo-Israel parliamentary group in the House of Commons Thursday.

(At United Nations headquarters in New York, the ambassador's reported remarks were cited by the Soviet Union and Jordan Thursday as proof that Israel started the fighting.)

FIRST SHOT

Remez said the Guardian report that he "confessed freely that it was Israel who had fired the first shot" was "completely false."

The news report had "no bearing whatsoever on the content of the answers I made to questions at that meeting," he said.

In the Israeli version of the start of the war, the ambassador said an Egyptian attack was "clearly started" during the early hours Monday "and the Israeli plan of defence was put into operation."

"At that time Egyptian planes in considerable quantities were picked up on the radar screens," he said. "They were flying in the general direction of the Tel Aviv area and it was not too difficult to imagine their intention.

"Egyptian guns opened fire on our settlements along the Gaza Strip. Egyptian columns moved towards our borders.

"At that moment if anyone still had a doubt in his mind that the 'first shot' had been fired against us (even if one forgets all the terrorist activities that preceded it) I would like to know if he would recommend his own country, in similar circumstances, to halt interception of attacking aircraft and armored columns until a devastating and irreparable blow had already been launched on his civilian centres and military targets."

Prior to the outbreak of fighting "Egypt massed nearly 100,000 men, more than 900 tanks and formidable amounts of artillery, air power and other supporting weapons on the borders of Israel," the letter said.

BLITZ ATTACK

"Their disposition as appeared on the 3rd (Saturday, June 3) was clearly intended for the launching of an immediate blitz attack, designed to cut off the southern part of the Negev of Israel and plunge into the Tel Aviv area via the Gaza Strip."

The next day orders were issued to Arab troops around Israel's borders that "virtually commanded all . . . forces to open attack on Israel and destroy her," the letter said.

With his letter the ambassador enclosed what he said was a secret order to the Egyptian air force issued May 27 and captured by the Israelis at El Arish.

The Guardian did not publish the document but said it appeared to be an order for attacking airfields and other objectives in Israel and bore no date.

Egyptian 'War Order' Recovered

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Israeli government released what it said was a captured war order Wednesday night in an attempt to show that Egypt had planned a massive attack on Israeli territory.

The order allegedly was written by Field Marshall Abdel Hakim Amar, deputy supreme commander of the Egyptian armed forces, issued June 2, and then captured when the Israelis took El Arish.

Amar is said to have told his troops that Israel might attack Egypt before Iraqi forces could become effective on the Jordan front.

"Accordingly," Amar is quoted as declaring, "I have prepared my plans and given orders to prepare operations. I call on each one of you to fight with the greatest strength . . . our objective will be to destroy the principal armed forces of Israel. Our armed forces can do this with the tremendous resources at their disposal . . ."

LEADERS BUGGED?

Israelis Offer Tape Evidence

JERUSALEM (UPI)—Israel said it listened in as the rulers of Egypt and Jordan plotted by telephone to make up charges that British and American combat planes were fighting alongside Israel.

The Israelis offered a tape recording of the alleged phone conversation.

Israeli military spokesman Col. Moshe Pearlman played the tape recording to newsmen Thursday. He said the voices on the tape were those of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser and King Hussien of Jordan, talking about a story they planned to invent.

Pearlman said the Israelis intercepted the conversation at 5:50 a.m. Tuesday (10:50 EDT Monday), just 15 minutes before Arabs began broadcasting the claim of American and British intervention.

The tape recorded conversation went like this:

First voice ("Nasser"): "Will we say United States and British or just United States?"

Second voice ("Hussein): United States and British!"

First voice: "By God, I say I will make an announcement and you will make an announcement and we will see to it that the Syrians will make an announcement that American and British airplanes are taking part against us from aircraft carries. We will stress the matter and drive the point home."

Second voice: All right! All right!

First voice: "Don't give up. We are with you with all our heart and we are flying our planes over Israel today. Our planes have been striking at Israel's airfields since morning."

Only 15 minutes after the purported taped conversation, the first Arab-charge at American and British planes had assisted the Israelis was broadcast.

* * *

The United States and Britain vehemently denied it, and King Hussein of Jordan made no mention of the charge at press conference he held Thursday in Amman.

In London, British military spokesmen said that foreign military attaches in Amman were told Thursday afternoon at a briefing that "Jordan had no knowledge of any British or U.S. aircraft operating against Jordan."

The Soviet union refrained from repeating the charges in the U.N. security council debates.

EBAN

Direct Talks Wanted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Thursday night Mideast peace terms must be hammered out "in direct negotiations between Israel and the Arab states."

"I think that the time has arrived for the states in the region to assert their sovereign capability to arrange their own affairs," Eban said.

Eban met with newsmen before boarding a plane for London en route to Israel.

Eban said the United Nations and the great powers could best contribute to a final settlement in the mideast by "encouraging the idea that there should be a discussion between the countries concerned."

The foreign minister steadfastly declined to discuss any of Israel's terms for an agreement with the Arabs.

Canoe Race Postponed

Centennial Canoe Race, scheduled for July 1, has been postponed to Aug. 26.

The Greater Victoria Centennial Society, sponsoring the event, said the race had been delayed because planner Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow will be away July 1.

Would-be participants are asked to leave their names at the Centennial office in Centennial Square and a meeting will be held to determine the rules of the race.

The proposed course is from the Inner Harbor to Portage Inlet and back.

SKIRTS RAISED TO GIVE MALE MORALE A BOOST

Amazon Image Is Out for Israeli Girl Army

TEL AVIV (AP) — Trying to look as chic as war in the desert will allow, Israel's shapely girl soldiers have been right behind the frontline troops in the Middle East war.

"They call them 'chen' for a 'charm'," said Col. Stella Levi, commander of the women's corps. The girls made an invaluable contribution to the blitzkrieg in Sinai and the conquest of the Jordanian bulge west of the Jordan River — as secretaries, field nurses and radio and telephone operators.

They also belong to fighting units, but serve only in auxiliary capacities.

The Israeli girls were in the conquered areas of Sharm el Sheikh, Egypt, and Jericho, Jordan, today. Most are 18 to 20 year olds doing their 20 months of compulsory military service, although several thousand women reservists up to age 34 have been on active duty this week.

Col. Levy said in an interview that her officers did nothing to discourage the girls from showing feminine charm. "It raises morale," Col. Levy said. The "Amazons in uniform" image of the Chen Corps is definitely out.

PREMIER BENNETT'S PROposal to have school taxes and municipal taxes levied on separate forms by the school board and the municipal councils is certainly no answer to the problem of heavy property taxes, still less does it meet the widespread demands for a complete study of provincial-municipal financing.

No one who has examined a local property tax form can have any doubts that the document covers two levies; the rates for both municipal and school needs are clearly stated, and the dollar amounts are separately listed. Apart from the possible detail that the school tax is levied by the school board and the general tax by the municipal administration—surely redundant information for most taxpayers—the single form serves all the purposes that Mr. Bennett's proposed two separate billings would do. The taxpayer would have only the added inconvenience of making two payments instead of one.

The principle that the spending body should be the taxing body is, of course, valid. But very minor changes in the existing tax form could emphasize this concept. Mr. Bennett's suggestion appears to be another case of proposing a meaningless measure in order to give the impression of initiating a reform. What is needed is not an exercise in duplicate printing and postage stamps but a recognition that the costs of education are becoming too great in our modern society to be efficiently borne by property.

When property taxes grow too great the inhibitory effects become evident; individual ownership tends to be discouraged, improvements are delayed or curtailed. And, of course, on the other side, it becomes more difficult to obtain public support for the necessary capital and operating costs of education.

The home-owners' grant, which Mr. Bennett would now apply exclusively to the school-board portion of taxes, is not the proper answer to the needs of modern communities in providing services. The need for a larger share of the province's general revenue for education becomes more obvious each year. Mr. Bennett's refusal to open the whole question of financing can only delay and hamper municipal efforts to meet the high priorities of our era, it cannot remove or reduce the need. Minor bookkeeping gimmicks are not the answer which eventually must be made.

The Danger of Miscalculation

WITH THE BUILD-UP OF TENsion in the Middle East over the past two weeks, a chilling remark by a spokesman for the United States Department of State, reported in the New York Times, has gone almost unnoticed. Asked if it was still the American position that China would not intervene in the Vietnam war, he replied that such an event was considered unlikely. However, he added, if this guess proves wrong, the United States will retaliate against the mainland, "with everything it has."

So, while the threat of another world war over the Middle East appears to have eased, that same danger continues to press in the Far East and it hinges on how committed China is to the North Vietnamese cause. For public consumption at least, the United States administration holds to the theory that Chinese intervention will not take place so long as there is no American movement across the border into Vietnam. For this they cite the precedent of Korea where the Chinese entered the war only after United Nations forces crossed the 38th parallel.

However, while this is the popular assumption as to how the UN found itself fighting not only North Koreans but also Chinese "volunteers," the fact is that Peking had decided on intervention at least a month prior to the Inchon landing, at the time when it was obvious that without direct armed aid the North Koreans would be beaten. This was known to the American command from secret documents taken from a Chinese intelligence officer who defected. Additionally, Peking had given a direct warning that invasion of North Korea would bring China into the war.

The critical calculation in Vietnam is not whether China will stay out of the fighting unless North Vietnam is invaded; rather it is whether China is prepared to allow North Vietnam to be militarily defeated, thus leaving China without a buffer zone along a sensitive flank.

North Vietnam as yet is far from being defeated, but the strategy of the United States, unable to achieve victory in South Vietnam, seems to be increasingly directed to that end through a saturation bombing campaign which is becoming less discriminating in its choice of targets. Thus the Americans hope for the collapse of North Vietnam as an active participant in the war, the very condition which is at least likely to bring the Chinese in. Clearly the danger of miscalculation is very great.

An Untenable Position

MR. JUSTICE LANDREVILLE'S resignation from the Ontario Supreme Court, announced yesterday, was long overdue. The evidence of highly questionable financial dealings with the Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company elicited by the Rand Commission of enquiry had led to moves in the Senate to secure Mr. Landreville's impeachment. But regardless of the legal status of the charges established against him, his continued presence on the bench had been rendered impossible merely through the sustained association of his name with the whole deplorable incident.

Like Caesar's wife, a judge must not only refrain from evil, he must also remain completely free from even the implication or appearance of wrongdoing. The long months of investigation, accusation and carefully gathered evidence had compromised Mr. Landreville's professional position beyond the point where his denials could rectify the situation.

Faced with the likelihood of impeachment—the first such case in Canadian history—he has chosen at last to resign and so has relieved himself, the government and the country of a sorry embarrassment.

Those Drug Prices

MR. MITCHELL SHARP HAS defined action the government will take if dealers in wholesale drugs advance their prices to cash in on the removal of federal sales tax on their products.

The minister of finance says: "There is only one effective way the federal government can bring about a reduction in the price of drugs, and that is by removing some of the protection now being given drug manufacturers. That is our purpose and that is our policy. . ."

In view of the sustained public protest against the high price of drugs, this course by Ottawa may seem to have been long in coming. It is nevertheless set out clearly now and could have two purposes: first, to reduce the price of drugs; second, as a reminder to manufacturers in other protected industries that there is a technique to safeguard the public from being overcharged and that it could be applied to them.

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

Beads on the Buckskin of the Budget

Western

WE have become so accustomed to lavishing credit for the budget on the minister of finance that there is now a regrettable tendency to overlook the annual contribution of the modest, unassuming departmental chaps whose wizardry glows through in unexpected places. It is the function of the minister nowadays to announce the size of the deficit, to dwell on various developments which, if untended, might make matters worse and to exhort us all to greater remedial efforts. But these are the obvious things, scarcely worth the time of a working wizard. What makes a budget a work of art, ever memorable in the financial service, are the little touches which would never occur to a minister plagued with last minute appeals from his colleagues and up to his neck in red ink.

The first budget ever to make an impact on me was Mr. Dunning's in 1930. No one now remembers the deficit of that year; there may even have been a surplus in those far-away times. But there is still a lingering fragrance about that budget because some departmental lover of the beautiful persuaded the minister, possibly at the last moment, to remove the tariff from cut flowers. (My recollection is that this did in the government, an unfortunate mischance which manifestly made no impression outside political circles).

Within the Priestcraft

Another minister discovered, possibly to his surprise, that the economic circumstances of the day permitted him to bring welcome relief to dealers in lapis luzuli. In general, however, our wizards tend to associate the beautiful either with the bizarre (from external evidence, numbers of them are recruited in old-fashioned quarters of Istanbul from families which once served the Grand Vizier) or with the technical. What appears to the public at large a humdrum, standstill budget may have the department fairly quivering with excitement because it is often the occasion for all sorts of technical changes so obscure that one wizard can explain them only by reference to another super-specialist wizard.

A superb example of the sort of change which appeals to Canadian officials is that permitting the import of margarine by persons suffering from rare allergies. This is not intended to deal with the general situation in which few, aside from the minister of agriculture, can afford butter. If that were the case, it would be simple to remove margarine, as a foodstuff, from the list of prohibited imports. What we have is a finely rationed compassion. It is not even possible to estimate the probable number of beneficiaries until quiet diplomacy has achieved an understanding between finance and the even more prudent philanthropists of the department of national revenue on the precise wording of the regulation to be issued by the governor in council.

Some Tension

There is a general belief in the country that some tension exists between Mr. Sharp's backroom Turks, the purveyors of these bizarre benefits, and Mr. Benson's Janissaries, who draft and defend the regulation. Thus if Finance, in a characteristic gesture, should decide to open our gates to Bactrian camels, National Revenue would immediately act to control the situation by limiting import to three-humped beasts for sale to Eskimos with close relatives in Guatemala.

But while the Bactrian situation is no doubt normal, cases occur which are explicable only on the basis of interdepartmental collusion. We learn from the budget that some citizens, intent presumably on improving their productivity, have won a tariff board decision extending the definition of tractor to cover front-end loaders, tractor shovels, tractor dozers, log skidders and log loaders. One might suppose that Finance, as the more compassionate department, would have welcomed this decision. Instead, and in order to protect production facilities established in Canada it has amended the tariff to reimpose duties. We may be sure that in the work of definition excessive care will be taken to ensure that National Revenue is not again caught with its regulations down.

More Modern Antiques

With the economy so precariously poised that Mr. Sharp was in no position this year to distribute much in the way of meaningful largesse, the wizards have zeroed in with compensatory concessions, appealing to forgotten groups and connoisseurs. Joy reigns unconfined in the department over the centennial bounty to purchasers of antiquities, once bound by an 1847 cut-off but now free to shop for items fashioned at any time down to our national birthdate of 1867. There are times when patriotism takes precedence even over the balance of payments.

The same carefree spirit is apparent in the reduction in the tariff on yeast. Think of John A. Macdonald, chaps, and carry on. There is also a gesture to OAS (think of Paul Martin) in relief for Mexican tequila.

As a matter of fact the thought involved in these items probably extends over many years. Our wizards, when not involved with budgets, spend their time developing these shelf projects for contingencies, such as Mr. Sharp's production this week.

Even the church has been remembered in tariff item 56400-1 which covers vestments, prayer shawls, prayer shawl fringes and prayer shawl bags and — significantly — parts thereof. Actually there is no tariff change on vestments which in effect are taken out and put back in for technical reasons. But the parson who formerly paid "various" rates for a patch on his cassock may now be able to get it for a straight 10 per cent.

It will be clear from these examples that the budget, although perhaps barren politically and dubious from the stern standpoint of the economist (unless he is a modern, advanced swinger), is nevertheless a modest triumph for the discriminating specialists whose memos add zest to the life of Mr. Sharp. Once again they have come through in the pinch, relieving the wastes of budget prose with items which other departmental experts will hark back to enviously in after years; tequila, antiquities, prayer shawls, and parts thereof.

Read Greek?

I am very anxious to contact somebody in Victoria who is able to read Greek script, as I am experiencing a great deal of difficulty in corresponding with recently acquired friends in the Aegean Islands, friends who converse fairly well in English but have no facility with the language on paper.

If there is a native Greek, a recent immigrant, or a linguist who could help, I would be very grateful.

I should perhaps mention that this is written Greek, possibly of a somewhat illiterate style, and almost definitely an island patois.—Miss B. Trottier, 679 Mount Joy.

Stronger 'Blood'

When Lister Sinclair's play, The Blood is Strong, was put on at the McPherson not long ago, one newspaper said it was very good while the Times said it was very bad. I haven't slept very well since for puzzling over who was right.

From the other end of Canada, however, now comes an answer. At the Dominion Drama Festival in St. John's, Newfoundland, the play was hailed as one through which "the love of Canada shines brightly." This is the point that was missed by your critic. It is the love of Canada, not of Scotland, that forms the theme of The Blood is Strong.

Of course, in this part of Canada, so devoted to old country ways, the basic appeal of Canada to immigrants, as shown in The Blood is Strong, may be missed, even by competent critics.

Still, the Bastion group is to be congratulated for their fine choice of a play, and for a fine performance.—F. B. Cahill, 2199 Neil St.

Retreating Gulls

One of the joys of living on the Oak Bay waterfront was the myriad of sea gulls swimming happily, just standing on the rocks or in the small parks, or flying leisurely in ever-varying patterns. But not now. All but a few of the pitifully small number left keep far from the shore and if one does approach the waterfront it flies warily and swiftly. The murderous crows watching from the tree tops have succeeded, in a few short weeks, in terrorizing (even killing) the gulls which, from time immemorial, have inhabited Oak Bay.

Is the same fate in store for the ducks with their young which are due to come any time now? And the mud hens, and sand pipers, and all the other birds?

Surely the Oak Bay Council can take steps to clear the black furies from the vicinity. Aren't there some crack shots among the Municipality's "men in blue"?—"Observer."

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Behind the Soviet Policy Shift

Frye

A STARTLING shift in Soviet policy toward the Middle East is seen here behind the Kremlin's acceptance—indeed, urgent advocacy—of UN peace moves after weeks of heel-dragging. It is widely assumed that a principal reason for Moscow's sudden interest in a ceasefire, beginning the afternoon of June 6, was that Israel was making sweeping military gains. Other reasons, however, suggested themselves to diplomats. They included:

- That the Kremlin is disillusioned with its Arab clients, dismayed at their inept use of expensive Soviet military equipment, and desirous of pulling in the reins.
- That the Kremlin, having closely monitored the American Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, knows the United States did not send planes to help Israel's advance, as the Arabs are charging, and resents this as a ham-handed Arab effort to provoke Soviet counter-intervention.
- That principal Soviet objectives—enhancement of its own influence in the Mideast and alienation of the Arabs from the West—have already been achieved, and now Moscow wants to freeze the situation before it is dramatically, and from its point of view catastrophically, reversed by Israel's military triumph.

Moscow is still offering the Arabs diplomatic support, sympathy, and help in pressuring the West. But it is taking no tangible action to rescue its clients from defeat.

Surprising Performance

The Kremlin has seemd to be as surprised as Westerners by Israel's military performance.

Relative bargaining postures of Israel and the Arab world have been transformed in the space of 48 hours.

As of June 4, Israel was under great pressure to purchase relief, at a considerable diplomatic price, from the Egyptian blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba, a key Israeli shipping route.

By June 6, it was the U.A.R. that was obliged to seek relief from Israeli pressure.

An initial down payment for this relief was acceptance of the Council's ceasefire appeal without strings attached. How much Israel would demand before calling off her armies was not then immediately clear.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban was imprecise on the point. His only specific terms were that the Arab states must also comply with the ceasefire. They have not yet "clarified their intentions," he observed.

Eban also outlined what he described as the basis of a long-range political settlement—acceptance by the Arabs of Israel's existence, direct Arab-Israeli peace negotiations, and "even-handed" behavior in the area by the great powers, obviously meaning the Soviet Union.

Driving a Bargain

How much of this Israel will insist on getting in return for a troop withdrawal was not clear, but it was obvious Eban wants as much of it as possible.

Meanwhile the United States and Britain are acting to rescue their disintegrating relations with the Arab world.

In an effort to explain and justify battlefield reverses, Arab governments charged that American and British planes took part in the war on Israel's side.

Washington and London vehemently denied it, fearing sweeping retribution against Western interests. Such retribution, indeed, is already in process.

United States delegate Arthur J. Goldberg has even offered to let UN inspectors aboard vessels of the American Sixth Fleet to verify the denial. But no one has taken him up on the offer.

Aid Program

The United States delegate further has offered co-operative foreign aid programs for the Arab world as part of a peace-building process when the fighting stops, and has reiterated—in the context of serious military peril to the Arabs—that American policy is to protect the "political independence and territorial integrity of all the nations" in the area.

It is clear, however, that the Arabs are persuaded the West has backed Israel, and their resentment will not be easily assuaged.

A Chance to Cover 'Crime of the Century'

By NELSON ALGREN

(This is part of a letter written by Mr. Algren, well-known American author — The Man With the Golden Arm, A Walk on the Wild Side, Notes from a Sea Diary—to the editor of The Critic, a Catholic literary magazine published in Chicago. Mr. Algren had been asked for his opinion of young Americans "who are making a cult of neo-Nazi paraphernalia.")

A legacy of hatred is left to Vietnamese children such as the boy above who gives a drink of water to his father, a Viet Cong suspect bound hand and foot and waiting removal to an interrogation centre.

Young Americans, seeking a cult, strike me as less ominous than the cultists of the Pentagon who have adapted the jargon of the public relations world to camouflage a cruel and cowardly assault for political ends.

Nauseous gas has become a "beneficent incapacitator." When used to smoke civilians out of caves into a 'field of fire" they haven't been machine-gunned so much as having been beneficially incapacitated, it would seem.

"If they weren't VC what were they doing out of their area?" an American colonel justified this manoeuvre. He was from Denver. What was he doing out of his area?

"Defoliation" now runs so trippingly on the tongue that anyone who claims it actually means crop-poisoning is subversive and ought to be drafted.

"Operation County Fair" has the clean outdoorsy ring of a Methodist outing in McHenry County on the longest day of the year:

"Operation County Fair consists of pulling out of the village structure the VCs, identifying them, encouraging them to return to the government side through the "Open Arms" Defector Program, capturing and killing them. We put a cordon around a hamlet, screen each individual and move the people into an enclosure where we give them medical treatment, feed them and issue identity cards."—Marine Corps Gen. Greene.

Road to Victory

Emphasis my own: After such encouragement, medical treatment must be fairly urgent. Rep. Chamberlain (R. Mich.) was so carried away, on a visit behind the American barbed wire, that he envisioned our Pacification Program as a direct road to victory.

"The simple application of soap helps remarkably," the representative writes. "As for candy, the nutritive value can't be questioned: Candy is Dandy and Soap Brings Hope."

This is the same operation, essentially, that the Japanese called, simply, "Break-and-Subdue." The difference seems to be that the Americans break and subdue with Tootsie Rolls.

Indeed, the major cadres applied to the American Pacification Program today are from the party whose formation was first encouraged by the old Japanese Empire: the Dai Viet. Diem's Concentration Camp Order of January 11, 1956, maintained the attitudes of Imperial Japan toward the Vietnamese peasantry; and Diem's measures have since been sustained by American treasure and American blood.

"What is it about Shintoism that makes atrocities possible?" General Yamashita was asked during his trials as a war criminal.

"In the same fashion as atrocities are made possible by Christianity," the general replied without anger.

The boy on the bike was executed in front of the Railway Building in Saigon, before TV cameras, by Marshal Ky.

Who was the boy on the bike, this strategist of terror willing to lay down his life to become a man?

Was his mother that woman of the An Lao Valley who lost both her arms and the lids of her eyes in an American napalm raid, so that now, when it is time for her to sleep, someone must put a black cloth across her eyes?

Did she have a nice wash-up with Camay before sleep? Did she get a free Milky-Way before nodding off? Did she get $33.90 for each of her children killed in the same raid. Or were they out of their area?

I think he is poor, empty-handed, a farmer or the son of a farmer, fighting rich men who possess the wealthiest army in the world at their command.

And yet he is not without wealth. In a sense he is the wealthiest of men. He is wealthy in hatred.

The murderous heart he carries is refreshed continually by the indifferent slaughter of women, children, men, buffalo, crops, homes culture and tradition.

Regains Pride

Indeed, he has lost so much he does not think of himself as being any longer among living men. He cannot survive without losing his manhood. All dignity taken from him, he regains his pride in executing Americans before they execute him.

Unless we know who this boy on the bike is, we do not know who we are. Because he has gone to the wall before, in many lands under many names; and will go to the wall again.

He is Father Camilo Torres, the guerilla priest of Bogota,, whose demands for land reform forced him out of his church and into the hills, to be shot down in a battle with Colombian police.

He is also that Austrian peasant youth who refused to soldier for Hitler.

"People today come up with every conceivable argument," this unsophisticated boy argued, "to put the issue and the conflict in a favorable light. For instance, one is simply fighting for the German State. Inasmuch as Christ commanded that one must obey the secular rulers even when they are not religious, this is admittedly true. But I do not believe that Christ ever said that one must obey such rulers when they command something that is actually wicked. Can I still say I have a Fatherland?"

Franz Jagerstatter was beheaded by the Nazis in Brandenburg prison on August 9, 1943.

Firm Unto Death

And there he stands; an untutored Catholic peasant who refused the Act of Supremacy; who never received the Sword of Loyola; so strongly rooted in the Church of the Martyrs and his catechism that he could go to his death firmly, without even the knowledge that anyone else in the world was aware of his stand.

He, too, was the boy on the bike. And for all the paraphernalia of public relations we now employ to disguise a peasant insurrection for land as a Communist conspiracy, he has 450,000 American soldiers pinned down.

For he is fighting the same type of war we ourselves fought, also against overwhelming odds, in order to gain our own land, our own culture; and recognition that we too belong to The Company of Men.

Perhaps that was why, when I received a phone call from a Boston newspaper on the day that a drifter of no trade slaughtered eight student nurses here, saying, "We want you to cover The Crime of the Century for us," I answered, "I don't want to go to Vietnam."

And hung up.

Pacem in Terris Conference Drew Only Bit Players

THE ECONOMIST

GENEVA — How many pretty girls it takes to promote peace. Abundant even by international conference standards, they were the only sign at Geneva that the second Pacem in Terris meeting was not dead on its feet.

That was not wholly the organizers' fault. The Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions, a California body whose mildly liberal reputation had led the State Department studiously to play down the conference months in advance, had hoped to provide a meeting place for the world's combatants, notably those of Vietnam.

The centre could not know that Presidents Johnson and Nasser jointly were about to do the State Department's work for it. The world's mounting crises did not keep most of the promised participants away. But with no Thant, no Goldberg, no Russians, no Chinese, no Vietnamese of any sort, this was Hamlet without anyone but the strolling players.

That said, the direction and much of the acting was lousy. At more than 309, the cast was wildly oversize if the object was communication and peace, not prestige.

The conference began badly, with commercials for the Vatican. A message from the papacy combined concern with self-advertisement — of the office, not the man — while U Thant, televised live from New York, blanketed his appeal that nations live up to their international commitments with a further eulogy which reinforced the impression that the recent papal discovery of peace and development was not just admirable but also original.

The conference proper did not pursue this line. Yet at least the official attitudes of the Pope and the UN Secretary General to peace are fruitful ones. Other men in office, and indeed many outside it, though supposedly speaking purely for themselves, hewed closely and unfruitfully to their country's line.

Notable examples were the Germans of east and west. The former, having been the only east Europeans to join the Russians in their sudden withdrawal just before the conference opened, had walked back in again just as suddenly when they realized that the rule that kept the South Vietnamese foreign minister, though in Geneva, out of the conference, for lack of his opponents, did not apply to Germany.

This official rigidity had one lone advantage. It made the political straws in the wind more obvious, such as they were. One surely was the fact that it was only the Russians who withdrew, another that a Polish statement on Vietnam, though it took the predictable line, did so with unpredictable mildness.

Those interventions that expressed a genuinely private note ran the natural gamut from amiable waffle to forceful statements that co-existence between rich and poor involved something more positive than preservation of the status quo.

While Senator Fulbright suggested the Tiran Strait issue should go to the World Court and Vietnam to the Security Council, Senator Clark of Pennsylvania read into the record a plug for a worthy organization to which he is honored to belong, while Sir Geoffrey de Freitas sent shivers down some backs with a proposal for a joint Russo-American military presence in the world's troubled areas.

●

Some of this was valuable. Nearly all of it, and all attempt at debate, was of necessity superficial. No doubt many useful contacts were made outside the formal sessions. But it was not only the journalists who were wondering whether this amounted to value for the $500,000 that at a minimum estimate the conference must have cost.

And now a word from our other sponsor, Investors Overseas Services Foundation: in other words the charitable angle, not his best-known one, of the American financial genius, Bernard Cornfeld.

The many-sided and well-rewarded prowess of Mr. Cornfeld and his bright young Fund of Funds salesmen is famous in Geneva to the point where little English secretaries in the bus will say enviously of a friend that she is going out with a man from IOS.

●

Famous, but not universally loved. The Swiss press has had its knife out for Mr. Cornfeld. His troubles with the American Securites and Exchange Commission have given skeptics about the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions plenty to work on.

It was somehow characteristic of the misfortunes of the second Pacem in Terris conference that its sponsors should have chosen to pick up at least four-fifths of their bill from this particular source.

All we needed to complete the scene was the man from UNCLE.

Two Major Weaknesses In Canada's Parliament

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

The new House Leader, Allan MacEachen, believes that Parliament can tidy up its work enough by the end of June to merit a summer recess. Whether it can or not is irrelevant to a need for a long parliamentary break.

Fisher

Ennui, exhaustion, deflation. Take any set of words which touch on men who have had too much to do for too long in one place, without much recognition. That's the Federal Parliament in June, 1967.

There's been much said and written about reforming Parliament. Rather "far out" measures like television proceedings or giving Parliament a fixed annual schedule, even fixed election dates, have been advanced and popularized. It's not our argument here that these would be improvements. They might be. It's not our thesis that a long rest will straighten problems out. That will help, and be abetted further if our official opposition returns invigorated with new leadership.

Looking ahead, the next Parliament should be better. It will more accurately reflect modern Canada because of riding redistribution.

Crowe

But rest and reflection, regrouping, new leaders or new representation, will not alter the two major weaknesses we see in the Ottawa parliamentary set-up. One is semi-constitutional. The other is largely procedural.

The semi-constitutional matter is what happens to responsible government or the cabinet system of government if or when you give more duties and, therefore, powers to parliamentary committees. It's fashionable to believe that committees can be the saviour of Parliament. Perhaps. But not until there is recognition that real power of either scutiny of spending or scrutiny and amending of legislation changes drastically the old traditions of cabinet superiority, government secrecy, and a government standing irrevocably behind everything it introduces.

* * *

Almost inadvertently, the supremacy of the cabinet is being sluffed away; more initiative and flexibility in its use is going to the prime minister and the House leader. Mr. Pearson seems ideally suited in temperament to give more rein to committees and thus halter his ministers. But we do not know how far this transfer is going or what objectives, if any, are in mind.

We contend that this issue of the future of cabinet government (solidarity, secrecy, and confidence) is too important to be either adjusted or eclipsed without open argument and a clear identification of the rights and limits of committees.

Never have we had so many committees doing so much work (mostly good work) in so many areas that were once hedged by the privileges of the ministers and their civil servants. If we don't get definition, sooner or later we'll get a blow-up or a retrogression.

The second major weakness we identified as "largely procedural."

Put most simply it is this. The majority of House time, perhaps as much as 80 per cent, is still occupied with debates to which no one knows the limits. Speeches follow one after the other. Few MPs beforehand and few ministers bother to listen to them. There are few hours of drama or even keen interest.

The speeches are usually dull and often trite, banal and repetitious. The real life of the House emerges in the question period. Then there is confrontation and verbal battle and jockeying and topicality. Only the question period holds the interests of ministers, back benchers and the galleries. The debates usually represent tedium piled on boredom.

* * *

We agree with John Diefenbaker that Parliament is supposed to talk, perhaps interminably on crucial matters. But it should be better talk, with real debate, centring on participants who are prepared and set for give and take. And set, above all, for resolution of the debate when the essence has been covered. To do this requires that most debates be staged with pre-set limits. Then we need the device of "yielding the floor." The Americans do this in their major debates.

Instead of a rota of speakers and the series of set-piece speeches, one after another, interchange, reasoned interrruptions and participation have interested politicians. Persuasion, adjustment, bite and wit, all have a chance.

Genuine debate such as we advocate requires specialization. That is, Canadian MPs would have to forget the assumption that any of the 265 may speak or could speak on each item. Further, they would have to cede the cherished right and belief that every MP should have repeatedly, each session, the prospect of putting on the record his set remarks on the world, Canada, and above all, on his constituency, as he sees them.

* * *

We would be pessimistic about such a major reform but for two points.

Firstly, we note great changes, at least in quantity, in the participation of MPs in the past decade. Secondly, we know the press and the public are no more bored with the present style of debates than are the MPs.

Look at these differences of input between the 1956 session and the 1966-67 session of Parliament: Hansard pages went from 7,600 to 14,407; Government bills from 51 to 83; Private members' public bills from 24 to 203; Written questions from about 580 to just under 3,000; Motions for emergency debates from 5 to 26; The return of papers sought and ordered from 98 to 167.

Since 1956 MP's salaries have almost doubled. They now have free air transport to and from home, free long distance calls, full-time secretaries, immensely-improved resource through copying machines, paper supplies, dictaphones, translation services and library facilities.

Clearly, MPs are doing more work at home and in the House. They now have a full-time, potentially exhausting and certainly a demanding occupation.

Neither performance nor practice is above criticism. The notable point is that both have been changing, undoubtedly for the better. To cap all this we should have the scope of committees formalized and defined and the poorest part of the routine performance (i.e., the debates), rejuvenated. The sooner the better!

Louise has worked an hour overtime twice this week—an IBM Selectric could have had her out by 5 PM

Those letters could have gone out in the early mail . . . if Louise had been using an IBM Selectric typewriter. Our studies have proved that a girl can usually do eight hours' work in seven hours when she gets her Selectric, and still have time enough to powder her nose.

It happens because the Selectric is an excitingly different kind of typewriter, part of a new system for speeding up word output in offices. We call it "word processing." It helps get the right words down on paper the right way and out to the right destination, faster.

Our representative will be glad to tell you our word processing story. Both sides. Output with the Selectric and Magnetic Tape Selectric typewriters. Input from the complete line of IBM Executary dictation equipment. Once you've got the message—and Louise her Selectric—you, your important letters and your office staff can all be out by 5:00.

Rainbow Bearded Iris Easily Grown

By HILDA BEASTALL

Until flowering season approaches, we hear little about the rainbow-hued German, or bearded, irises.

Hilda

Not so many years ago we had a local specialist grower delighting us with displays of the newest and best introductions at the June flower shows.

The latest introductions of these gorgeous blooms still appear locally in gardens, but unless the plants fail to give satisfactory flowers there are not many problems arising in their culture, so that we do not seem to discuss them often.

These bearded irises are usually seen in the tall varieties with huge flowers on strong stems. The sword-shaped leaves are broad, distinctive in character, making the plants of architectural value when grown against plain wall surfaces in the garden.

Called German irises because the early hybridizing was done in Germany, these plants are now usually known as "beareded," for the golden "beard" on each of the three "falls" is one of the remarkable features of the flowers.

Some varieties have the "falls" and the "standards" of the same color, others are contrasting, giving us bicolors.

Cultural demands on the gardener are few. These irises need good drainage in winter, a soil containing some humus but no manure, and an exposure giving the surface-showing rootstocks plenty of sunshine in summer.

The rootstocks are called rhizomes, in appearance like elongated, ridged potatoes. It is imperative that these rhizomes should be exposed to direct sunlight at the surface.

Division of the rootstocks is done immediately flowering ceases, but is usually only necessary if and when there are few blooms produced due to overcrowding of the roots.

When replanting, incorporate some bonemeal as fertilizer and a little lime if the soil is inclined to be acid. Bury the fibrous roots deeply each side of the rhizome which will rest on a mound of soil, exposed to the sun.

One good watering after planting will be enough to start the new growth.

RETURNING $15,000

City Windfall a Mistake

A $15,000 windfall to the city of Victoria two weeks ago was returned by council Thursday because it was all a mistake.

City manager Dennis Young told council sitting as a committee that an order in default of payment for a piece of property had been made on the basis of misunderstanding.

He recommended the forfeiture of money paid on account be lifted.

FINAL PAYMENT DELAYED

West Bay Investments Ltd. bought a $20,000 piece of land for its high-rise apartment block on West Bay, agreeing to four instalments of $5,000 each, three of which were made. Two or three extensions were granted for the final payment and interest at 6½ per cent was charged by the city.

When the sum was not paid by the end of the final extension, steps were taken to issue the default order, which carried a 90-day redemption period that expired May 23 this year. Both the land and money paid on instalments went to the city.

The order was made in the absence of Mr. Young, who was approached by a company representative the day before it expired. He agreed to recommend a further 60-day extension, not knowing the property was about to revert to the city by default.

Mr. Young said that in view of the misunderstanding by himself and the company, the forfeiture of $15,000 paid up to last year should not be imposed and the company's cheque for the balance owing should be accepted as final payment.

"I feel sure it is not the city's intention to take advantage of the company as a result of misunderstanding," the manager said.

Council agreed.

Expert Says Law on LSD Also Risky

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Humphry Osmond, a U.S. LSD researcher, says a section of the proposed Canadian law covering expert identification of the drug is potentially dangerous.

In a telephone interview from Princeton, N.J., Dr. Osmond said:

"We have to remember that 10 years of a man's life may be at stake on this."

The proposed law provides a maximum penalty of 10 years for conviction of possessing LSD for trafficking. As worded, the legislation would require an accused person to prove that if he were in possession of the drug, it was for a lawful purpose.

The maximum penalty for possession would be a $5,000 fine or three years or both.

The legislation includes a provision that would allow as evidence the certificate of an analyst stating he found a substance to be LSD.

FEW ANALYSTS

"This seems to me to be incredible—there are no more than half a dozen men in Canada qualified to certify that a substance is LSD," Dr. Osmond said. "This is a substance quite difficult to analyse."

He said legislation forbidding hallucinogenic substances would deny people access to a large part of the natural world.

"To enforce this, a huge police force would be needed, tending to lead to a police state."

Dr. Osmond said the wording of the proposed law, which defines LSD simply as lysergic acid diethylamide, would run into legal tangles.

In a recent case in England, two men charged with possessing LSD were acquitted when experts disagreed over what LSD is. The law was changed to ban all derivatives of lysergamide, the chemical from which LSD is made.

Hot Undersea Bed Proves Not So Hot

VILLEFRANCHE, France (Reuters)—American swimmer Mary Margaret Revell today abandoned her attempt to live under the sea for 72 hours in a Mediterranean bay, surfacing after slightly more than 15 hours.

Miss Revell plunged into the Mediterranean here in a skin-tight rubber suit Thursday in an attempt to stay underwater for three days and become the world's first aquanaut.

She was testing man's ability to adapt to a completely different environment and also aimed at carrying out biological research at a special work area about one mile from her living base.

The 29-year-old swimmer from Shafter, Calif., a onetime polio victim, assembled equipment worth $33,000 and a team of underwater experts for the experiment.

Miss Revell gave up because of cold and fatigue following the failure of two parts of the experimental equipment.

Her face mask put painful pressure on her jaw and a specially-designed hot-water bed in which she was to have slept did not keep her warm.

TRAFFIC FINE

Ian Mortimore 1680 Cedar Ave., was fined $35 for careless driving when he appeared in traffic court Wednesday.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO (AP) — The apparent end of general hostilities in the Middle East caused a decline in grain futures prices on the Chicago board of trade today.

Wheat fell over 4 cents, soybeans more than 3½, corn about 2 and rye and oats about one. After the decline, most gains staged a comeback.

The price fall had already been established when news that President Nasser of the United Arab Republic had resigned reached the floor. There was small rally in prices but it was not sustained and near the close prices fell back again.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Most grain showed some rallying tendencies in late trading today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, recouping some of the early trading losses.

In the oilseeds, flax rallied although rapeseed was somewhat easier due to light action. There was moderate trade in oats and barley and rye received some stimulation from a reported sale to Norway.

Barley was the feature in the week's trade as exporters purchased large amounts, estimated at more than 5,000,000 bushels. The United Kingdom has purchases 1,000 tons of flaxseed and the report indicated the Norway Rye purchase amounted to between 4,000 and 5,000 tons.

Wall Street prices improved this afternoon following news that President Nasser of Egypt had resigned. Trading was fairly active.

AT NEW YORK gainers outnumbered losers by about 7 to 4 and the Dow Jones industrial average erased a small loss and moved into plus territory.

The day began with a vigorous rally at the opening in a follow-through to the late news Thursday of the Egyptian acceptance of a ceasefire. The advance ran out of steam quickly, however, and prices softened.

Nasser's resignation was merely another item in the series of events favoring Israel since the start of Middle East hostilities on Monday, brokers said, and the question remained as to how a durable peace will be worked out. Caution increased because of the coming weekend.

AT VANCOUVER Coronet rose .05 to a new high of $1.93.

Placer was up $3.62 to $36.37, Dynasty improved .30 to $7.65 and Pyramid was .10 better at $3.75.

On the down side, Bethex, at .71 and Magnum, .64, both dipped .04.

B. C. Telephone was .50 better at $65.50 in the industrials where Trans Mountain fell .37 to $18.62.

In the oils, Bata Resources was active and put on .12 to $1.32.

AT TORONTO oil stocks moved lower while uraniums advanced in light mid-afternoon trading.

Analysts attributed the drop in oils to profit taking and the feeling among investors that Arab oil producing countries must re-open trade with Europe and America or ruin their own economies. Analysts said if sales resume there will be dimininished opportunities for expanded Canadian oil sales.

Dome lost 1 to 55¾, Shell ½ to 27½, Home B ¾ to 21½ and Husky and Imperial Oil ⅛ each to 15⅞ and 59½.

Among uraniums, Denison rose 2½ to 74½, Roman Corp. 1 to 21¼, Rio Algom ¼ to 34¼, and Preston ⅛ to 20⅞.

Cominco dropped 1⅛ to 31⅜ in base metals after declaring a semi-annual dividend of 80 cents a share. Formerly the company paid 90 cents a share semi-annually.

Industrial issues made small advances with Moore Corp. up ¾ to 28⅞ and Bramalea ⅝ to 11.

AT MONTREAL most sections began moving higher in intensified trading towards 2 p.m. today.

AT LONDON the Egyptian acceptance of a ceasefire in the Middle East plus hopes for reflationary moves by the British government helped the stock market to move to firmer ground today.

Wall St. Swingers Threat to Stability

By AB KENT
Business Editor

A $542 million mutual fund is accused in Delaware of inflating its assets and generating excessive sales commissions by encouraging in-and-out trading.

Kent

This change embodies a clear example of the type of trading by powerfull funds and institutional investors depored a few days ago by William Martin, U.S. federal reserve board chairman.

He said the "swingers" on Wall Street are in a position to damage or destroy public confidence in the market.

As has been said so frequently in recent months, once public confidence is shaken, the market itself is in bad shape.

Heavy trading in certain areas by groups such as mutuals holding big blocs of shares can give great impetus to market swings — both up and down.

It is a practice to which the profit-takers have become attracted and its effect is changing the role of the mutual fund, originally a conservative, means of employing limited capital for long-term gains.

★ ★ ★

When the Delaware case was reported, the act of buying and selling selling on short term was described as a "fund industry practice."

It enables shareholders in need of quick cash to liquidate part of their holdings, then come back in up to the same amount without paying sales charges.

Prevailing prices apply at both times of the transaction, so that if prices should fall in the interval the shareholder comes back with more shares than before.

The U.S. National Association of Securities Dealers last year warned mutual funds of abusing the practice.

★ ★ ★

The suit charges that would-be investors were told they could use the withdrawal and reinstatement privileges of the fund for speculative purposes on the side, such as short-term market trading in other securities.

Or by repeated exercise of the privilege could play short-term market swings as reflected in the daily quotation of fund shares.

Mutual funds themselves represent a great influence in the market, but institutions such as trusts, schools, colleges, churches, unions, pension and profit-sharing plans, insurance companies, hospitals, industrial corporations, fraternal, welfare and other public associations together create a formidable assembly of organized traders.

Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. is just over a year old as a public participation company. Its first annual report following an offering of 90,000 shares at $12.87½ in the spring of 1966 is an encouraging document.

By May 31 of this year the value of shares on Vancouver Stock Exchange had reached $22-$23.

The fiscal year ended March 31 showed a 40 per cent increase in sales, 22 per cent in net cash and 34 per cent in net income compared with the operating subsidiaries the previous year.

President Frank A. Griffiths and executive vice-president William J. Hughes look forward to changes in broadcasting legislation that will make 1967 "an important year."

It was anticipated that on the success of B.C. television outlets CHAN of Vancouver, and CHEK, Victoria, this year will be even better.

Western increased its holding in B.C. Television Broadcasting System Ltd. — which operates CHAN and CHEK — to 16.6 per cent during the year.

The company's net income last year was $547,087 compared with $408,311, on gross income of $1,085 million against $774,000 the year before.

Per share earnings were $1.24, up 32 cents, and a 55-cent dividend was paid — the first.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce industrial development research commission is considering a new questionnaire to businessmen asking for views on what type of light industry would be most welcome for their purposes in the capital region.

Chamber vice-president William Armstrong suggests warehousing may be a natural, both to cut costs and to reduce delivery time. It is also a "clean" industry.

But he said outside companies can not be encouraged to locate here if the people of Victoria continue to tolerate the poor service they now get from the mainland on many lines of goods.

The public must stimulate demand for better service, he said.

PRICE CUT PLEDGED FOR COLOR TV SETS

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Munk, president of Clairtone Sound Corp., Ltd., of Toronto, said Thursday the firm will slash prices on some of its 1968 color television models by up to $50.

Mr. Munk was commenting in an interview on price reductions announced by large manufacturers in the United States on new lines, ranging up to $30 on 18-inch models.

Sales of color TV sets in Canada this year have lagged behind forecasts.

Last fall it was predicted that 1967 sales would reach 165,000 units—an estimate now revised to 140,000.

COUNCIL ROUNDUP

New Bid Launched For Wharf Taxes

City council Thursday launched a new effort to get $100,000 in taxes on Ogden Point wharves from the Canadian National Railway.

Aldermen asked support from the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities to enlarge terms of reference on government policy enabling the CNR to pay property taxes. The federation meets in Montreal next week.

Transport Minister Jack Pickersgill earlier this year announced the CN for the first time would pay local taxes on buildings and other property.

But investigation disclosed the policy excludes docks, piers and wharves. The CN operates two in Victoria.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow said the city manager estimated $100,000 would be due the city if the docks were taxable. Mayor Hugh Stephen said the wharves are worth at least $1 million.

RIFLEMEN

A battalion of riflemen under full arms will parade through the city July 1, just as their ancestral unit did in the streets of Toronto July 1, 1867.

First Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, will repeat the march and fire a few de joie as a centennial gesture.

The Work Point unit, which has the freedom of the city, was given permission to march under arms, a special privilege for special occasions.

The Queen's Own were a militia unit originally and celebrated their 100th anniversary in 1956 when the Second Battalion was barracked at Camp Gordon Head.

YMCA BUILDING

Owners of the former YMCA building on Blanshard Street have failed to comply with orders to clean up the building.

Council authorized steps to be taken in accordance with by-laws and fire legislation because previous orders have been ignored.

City manager Dennis Young said piles of debris litter the unoccupied building and on two occasions children had started fires in it, luckily without setting fire to the structure.

EXAMINATION

Ald. Ian Stewart received assurances from the mayor and convention centre chairman Ald. Percy Frampton that private proposals would be considered in examination of a Victoria centre.

Worthy ideas from private enterprises should not be overlooked although the city is proceeding with study of a publicly-financed centre, he felt.

PARKING SPACE

Additional parking space at Cook and Caledonia will be provided for Royal Athletic Park patrons at a cost of $2,190 for levelling and gravel.

The lot will be turned over the recreation and community services for administration.

"This is a step forward. We should endeavor to get as much parking space as possible in the Royal Athletic Park area," said Ald. Frampton.

PROPERTY TAX

A 1 per cent increase to 5 per cent on prepaid property taxes was approved by council, which agreed to April 30 as prepaid cutoff date.

Council approved a finance committee recommendation setting out terms of a working agreement for civic electricians covering 1967-68, and based on terms enjoyed by B.C. Hydro employees.

SALES TAX

Aldermen supported a Calgary resolution to the federal government seeking removal of sales tax on items purchased by municipalities.

"We've tried it before without success," Ald. Edgelow remarked, "but I think it makes sense."

EXPORT GOAL of $11,250 million likely will be reached by Canada this year, according to Trade Minister Robert Winters.

CANADA ROUTE LIKELY

OTTAWA (CP) — Another objection fell Thursday to Trans-Canada Pipe Lines' favored Canadian route for a new west-east gas line to feed Ontario and Quebec markets.

Northern and Central, one of the big three Ontario gas distributors, "reluctantly" withdrew its objection at a national energy board hearing. It did so because of the possibility of a gas shortage.

●

Up to this time, Northern and Central had opposed the $330,000,000 proposal partially to twin Trans-Canada's existing route through Northern Ontario.

The distributor, along with the other big trans-Canada distributing firms, had wanted a route that would open new markets along the north shore of Lake Superior instead of the twinning project.

●

Another of the big three, Consumers Gas, similarly reversed itself at Wednesday's board hearing. The third in the triumvirate, Union Gas, took a new noncommital stance, in the face of a gas rationing prospect next winter if new facilities were not built.

The distributors had earlier favored the idea of twinning the existing line from Winnipeg to the northwestern Ontario centre of Nipigon. But from that point the distributors had wanted the line to swing south to serve Sault Ste. Marie, Espanola and other points before rejoining the existing route at Sundridge, Ont.

U.S. Ownership Extensive But Export Totals Aided

OTTAWA (CP)—The government published Thursday new statistics about the operations and financing of large foreign-owned companies in Canada.

A 75-page report issued by the trade department lists the aggregate sales, profits and purchases in 1964 and 1965 reported by 820 subsidiaries each with assets exceeding $5,000,000.

Most of these firms are wholly-owned by foreign interests and do not publish financial statements in Canada. The new information was gathered by the trade department in a special survey started a year ago.

The report, ordered by Trade Minister Winters, gives no information on the proportion of Canadian industry that has fallen under foreign control.

A cabinet committee headed by Privy Council President Gordon is drafting a white paper on the degree of foreign ownership.

Mr. Winters, a strong supporter of foreign investment, noted in a statement the subsidiaries exported nearly 20 per cent of their output in 1965, which was "only moderately short" of the proportion in Canadian-owned firms.

Mr. Gordon has argued foreign-owned companies are mainly branch plants for the Canadian market, with little interest in promoting exports.

The 1965 figures show the reporting subsidiaries exported goods worth $2,750,000,000 and had imports of $2,680,000,000, for a trade surplus of $70,000,000.

Seventy-seven per cent of the imports came from the U.S. and 63 per cent of the exports went to the U.S.

Net profits of the subsidiaries rose to $787,000,000 in 1965 from $750,000,000 the previous year.

Price Blast 'Not Fair'

TORONTO (CP)—Last year's criticism of supermarkets for the high cost of food was not fair because all levels of governments contributed to inflation themselves, Dominion Stores Ltd. says in its annual report.

The supermarket chain, with 360 stores and 57 more under construction, says food stores "as the final link in the chain of food distribution, came in for the bulk of criticism and adverse publicity" last year.

Criticism led to consumer boycotts and protests and to parliamentary hearings on the cost of food.

Dominion Stores says its net profit in the year ended March 18 was $9,424,804, or $1.16 a share compared with $10,655,576 or $1.32 a share the previous year. It was the first decline in profit since 1960.

Is Shamrock Slip A Turnout Trick?

Revived 'Bellies Hand Victoria Another Setback

NORTH SURREY — Gamal Nasser isn't the only one with a crisis on his hands. What about Dave Unwin?

The freshman coach of Victoria Shamrocks, hoarse from trying to exhort his Shamrocks to victory, saw them taste their second successive Inter-City Lacrosse League defeat Thursday night.

New Westminster Salmonbellies, once everybody's patsy, turned tiger and dumped the Rocks 11-7.

The defeat locked Shamrocks on a second-place tie with Vancouver, one point behind Coquitlam Adanacs.

'Bellies have eight points in a dozen games, six of them coming in contests with Victoria. They defeated the Rocks 10-8 in Victoria Wednesday.

Rocks were without Larry Clarkson, Ron Jay and Billy Harris Thursday. Unwin didn't use their absence as an excuse.

FORGOTTEN SO SOON?

"We won with two lines before," Unwin said. "But we were running. Against New Westminster we weren't. We also are not shooting, not pursuing loose balls, not aggressive enough."

Shamrocks' lacklustre week may also have been caused by a carryover from past seasons—waning attendance at practices.

"We had full turnouts before the season but lately attendance has been falling," Unwin said. "I've called a workout for Sunday, and it will be a full workout We could use two or three good drills before we meet Vancouver next week, but there isn't time."

Shamrocks held two of Wally Hendersons's offensive units in check Thursday but couldn't deter the Paul Parnell-Cliff Sepka-Mac Tyler unit.

SIX FOR PAUL

Parnell set up six goals; Sepka and Tyler split four.

For Victoria the Dillons were the show. In what may have been his best effort of the season, pint-sized —135 pounds) Nirmal was two-and-two. Brother Ranjit scored one goal, set up three others.

But the crisis remains. With 'Bellies higher than an LSD-user, Shamrocks must find some answers quickly. Or else.

LIONS SUSPEND KAPP FOR SEASON

VANCOUVER (CP)—Quarterback Joe Kapp is suspended for the 1967 Western Football Conference season, the British Columbia Lions announced today.

Allan McEachern, club president, said the action was taken because Kapp had signed with Houston Oilers, of the American Football League, while still under contract to the British Columbia club.

The announcement was made at a press conference.

McEachern said Kapp still is under some type of personal contract with the Oilers and has accepted money from the Houston club. He said the Lions believe it impossible to retain Kapp under those circumstances.

The suspension is effective today.

Chicago Group Buys Trotters

The basketball empire founded by shrewd Abe Saperstein was sold Thursday for $3,710,000.

A syndicate headed by Potter Palmer, scion of a wealthy Chicago family, won out in bidding over two other groups.

Circuit court judge Robert Dunne approved the sale of the Harlem Globe Trotters to Palmer.

"Saperstein saw fit to give the co-executors of his estate discretion to sell his lifetime enterprise," the judge said. "I will not interfere with the exercise of that discretion."

Unsuccessful bidders were Metromedia ($3.5 million) and Linn Broadcasting Co. ($3 million).

Ross Back on Top In Stocker Chase

Round and round the stockers go and when they finish Ross Surgenor leads them. . . .

The No. 1 point man at Western Speedway the last two years, Surgenor is swinging along in first place again this season. He has 86½ points, 11 more than Roy Haslam. A distant third with 52½ are Rick O'Dell and Dick Miller.

Surgenor, O'Dell, Murray Nixon, Tony Mortel and Bob Bissenden have won feature "A" main event trophies this year. Surgenor's surge to success is based on his finishing more events with more consistency than his rivals.

The stockers take over at Western Saturday with time trials scheduled for 7 p.m.

Intercity modifieds burn the Western blacktop Sunday at 1:30 p.m. Cars from Vancouver, Nanaimo and Victoria will be in the chase, the second of it's kind here this year. "B" and "C" class stockers will also run Sunday.

DILLARD WILL STAY . . . WITH LAWSUIT LOSERS

'No Hard Feelings . . .'

OTTAWA (CP) — Fullback Jim Dillard, fresh from a court battle with his employers, the Ottawa Football Club, says he is prepared to remain with the team.

"If they don't trade me, I'll be back," he said.

In an Ontario Supreme Court decision Tuesday, it was ruled that Dillard's contract with the Riders must remain in force but that the club must return $2,696 it had deducted from his pay.

Dillard took the club to court to recover the money. The Riders had reimbursed Oakland Raiders of the American Football League for half of $5,000 they paid Dillard as a bonus for signing with them. He never reported to the U.S. team.

Riders have a claim on the big backfielder for this season and again in 1968 under the regular league option clause.

Red O'Quinn, Rough Riders' general manager, told a reporter after the trial:

"Sure, he's a member of our roster. We want him out to practice. Just where, how and when he plays is in the hands of the coach (Frank Clair)."

"The court proceedings had nothing to do with me. We (the coaches) are counting on Dillard. But like just about every other member of the team, we'll consider a trade for Jim if it's to the benefit of the club."

YOU'RE OUT, UMP!

Eager umpire Felix Wingfield leaned over shoulder of catcher to get good look at pitch in high school baseball game Thursday. Pitch was too low. So was crouch and Wingfield needed repair job on trousers before resuming umpiring duties as tournament continued today at Lexington, Ky.

Kelly, Cooke, Players Play 'Strike It Rich'

MONTREAL (CP) — Red Kelly is out of limbo today, Jack Kent Cooke is "ecstatic," owner - player relations have reached a new high and added incentive has been given to newcomers attempting to reach hockey's major league — the NHL.

All four factors were achieved Thursday, the final day of the National Hockey League's four-day annual meeting—its first as an expanded 12-team, two section circuit.

Red Kelly, the former Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings star, finally made it as coach of Los Angeles Kings of the new west division after a 48 - hour hassle between the two clubs over his services.

The flamboyant Cooke, whose Hollywood - type approach to the NHL promises a lively future for his Los Angeles club, said he is "ecstatic and delighted" that "reason prevailed and the dispute was resolved in a sensible manner."

The newly - formed players' association won two points in its first meeting with management representatives in a matter of 45 minutes Thursday morning.

MINIMUM INCREASED

Clarence Campbell, league president, announced after the final governors' session that the minimum starting salary for players entering the league had been increased to $10,000 from $7,000.

In a suddenly - consummated deal, the Kelly incident became a thing of the past when the Leafs' general manager, Punch Imlach, and Cooke agreed to a deal that sent Ken Block, a 23-year-old native of Steinbach, Man., to Toronto in exchange for the redhead.

The original dispute arose when Toronto filled with Kelly after the 10th round of Tuesday's expansion draft. Cooke and Kelly immediately cried foul, and maintained that a deal had been made with the Leafs that would free the former Toronto centre and winger for the West Coast coaching job.

Imlach maintained no such deal had been made and that Cooke was taking advantage of him by not claiming Kelly in the early rounds if he wanted him as coach.

REGAN NAMED

"Anyway I'm sure relieved and it's nice to get out of limbo," Kelly said after a joint statement by the two clubs announced the settlement. At the same time the Kings announced that Larry Regan, another former Leaf, will be the club's general manager.

Thursday saw the second meeting between the newly-formed NHL players' association, under the aegis of Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson, and the owner's committee.

The outcome was that players now will receive payment for exhibition games played in NHL cities and between NHL teams. Previously no extra remuneration was awarded the players for these pre - season games.

Also agreed to by the owners was a 50-per-cent increase in the per-diem expense rate allowed players for meals and miscellaneous expenses incurred during road trips—$15 from $10.

When the league governors broke up, Campbell had further good news for some of the new players coming into the expanded league.

"This has nothing to do with the players' association, but after several months of study the governors voted today to boost the minimum salary for players in the NHL to $10,000."

This is an increase of $3,000 over last season's minimum.

Campbell said the average base salary in the league last year was $18,220 and that it jumped "to between $24,000 and $25,000" when added benefits from playoff money, bonuses and pension benefits were added.

He said only one player earned less than the new $10,000 minimum last season.

VICETTES OPEN SEASON WITH 2-DAY TOURNEY

Victoria Molsons Vicettes launch their softball season this weekend with a senior women's invitational tournament at Heywood Avenue Park.

Two Vancouver clubs—Fairmonts, last year's provincial senior "B" champion, and O'Keefes—will provide the opposition for the Victoria club in the two-day, six-game tourney.

Fairmonts and O'Keefes will open the tourney Saturday at 4 p.m. and Vicettes will face Fairmonts at 6:30.

Sunday games are scheduled for 11 a.m., 1, 3 and 6 p.m.

Eagle Chip Aids Temper Control

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) Even - tempered Bob Goalby, aided by a hot putter and an even hotter wedge, was off and running today in his bid for top prize of $20,000 in the $100,000 Buick Open.

The 36 - year - old, once regarded as one of the most short-tempered members of the PGA tour, shot a red hot 69—three under par—in the opening round Thursday.

His display was the more remarkable since it included taming the 585-yard 16th hole at Warwick Hills Country Club, generally rated as one of the toughest holes in golf.

Goalby put two tremendous wood shots together and found himself lying some 75 feet away from the pin. He wedged in from there for an eagle three.

His formula of no putts also paid off on the 11th as he chipped in from 40 feet for a birdie three.

The 69 left him a stroke ahead of Hugh Royer and Frank Beard of Louisville, Ky., both of whom had 70s.

BLOWS ON 18

Royer, four strokes under par after 17 and seemingly headed toward the opening day lead, had a disastrous, unique finishing hole.

One of his partners, cigar-chomping Charlie Sifford, touched off a long debate when he pushed his drive into the rough between two traps.

Sifford contended he was entitled to a free lift since the ground was under repair. Play was held up until Wade Cagle of the PGA gave the go sign to Sifford, and the latter dropped in a better location.

Royer, who admitted he was "really under pressure" during the 15-minute tie-up, hit his second shot into a trap and blasted clear over the green on his third try, landing against a temporary fence. That brought Cagle out again, and after another delay he ruled Royer was entitled to a free lift. He finally holed out, two over par for the hole.

There was considerable grumbling among the pros about the condition of the greens on the back nine, but none would be quoted.

Yarrows Squeeze By

Yarrows edged Post Office 1-0 in an Industrial Softball League duel Thursday at Macdonald Park. In other contests, Northwestern downed Six-Mile House 8-1 and Wilsons tripped Bapco 7-5.

Give Horlen Tissues and He's Murder

Joel Horlen is chewing up opposing hitters almost as fast as he is tissues.

Tissues?

That's right. The Chicago White Sox right-hander, who ran his record to 7-0 with a 5-2 victory over Boston Red Sox in the first game of Thursday's doubleheader, attributes part of his success to tissue chewing. He says chewing gum bloats him and tobacco makes him sick, so he chews a couple of wadded tissues while pitching.

"It relaxes me," he says.

His hurling, aided by his chewing, gave the White Sox a split when they lost the nightcap 7-3, remaining 1½ games behind league - leading Detroit Tigers who had the day off.

In other American League action, Cleveland Indians tripped Minnesota Twins 7-5 on Max Alvis' two home runs; California Angels edged Baltimore Orioles 6-5 on homers by Rick Reichardt, Jim Fregosi and Jimmy Hall, and New York Yankees blanked Washington Senators 6-0 in the only night game.

The only runs off Horlen came on Carl Yastrzemski's run-scoring double and Joe Foy's homer. But Gerry McNertney's first homer of the season with none on and a two-run blow by Ken Berry offset that brief Boston show of might.

HANDCUFFS CHISOX

The Red Sox erupted for five runs in the second inning of the second game that started Gary Bell to a successful debut with Boston.

Bell, recently acquired in a trade with Cleveland, scattered nine hits, and Chicago could only touch him in the first inning when Tom McCraw singled in two runs and in the ninth when Ron Hansen homered.

So who needs Hank Aaron anyway?

Sure, he's leading the National League with 15 home runs and sure he's driven in 35 runs and scored 40 times. But, it's a fact that Atlanta Braves have been better off without him.

Aaron missed his second straight game Thursday night and the Braves, who had dropped 10 of 13 games before he was sidelined, won their second straight, downing Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4.

There were only two other games played on the National League schedule Thursday. San Francisco Giants ended Cincinnati's one-run rut, beating the Reds 8-5, and St. Louis Cardinals defeated Houston Astros 6-2.

Aaron is nursing a muscle pull in his side.

The Braves pounded out a 13-5 victory over the Dodgers Wednesday and then beat Los Angeles ace Don Drysdale with a late rally Thursday.

SPORTS DIARY

By SHIRLEY POVICH

(The Washington Post)

It is clear now that America is not conditioned to an instant love affair with soccer, the new game in 17 cities. A creeping affection for soccer as a professional sport could develop, but the smallish crowds are saying that United States fans aren't plighting anything permanent yet.

The whole thing got started, it may be remembered, in the summer of 1966 when America's masses were suddenly alerted to the excitement of big-league soccer via Telstar, the communications satellite. From England came the wondrous performances of the teams in the finals of the World Cup competition, the soccer Olympics that were clicking off another four-year cycle.

Americans could admire the exhibition by the two finest soccer teams culled from almost all points of the globe, and they did. Here was a game they had heard about, but had underrated. This was pardonable, perhaps, because Americans never before had seen major-league soccer, only the home-grown form in their colleges and prep schools.

At the same time, a special group was admiring America's seeming admiration of soccer. These were the professional promoters who were eager to get in on the ground floor and whipped up not one, but two, American professional soccer leagues. The result has been overkill of the first mere sprout of soccer interest.

America, which never knew organized professional soccer before, is being practically lathered by the new game, and has been left in a welter of confusion. The United Soccer Association has teams in 12 cities. The National Professional Soccer League has teams in 10 cities. In New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Toronto the two leagues are competing for the yet-unappraised soccer dollar. Which league has official sanction of the Federation of International Football Associations?

The U.S. fan could be bewildered.

Eyes Sparkled at TV Loot Prospect

Promoters have jumped in with fat chequebooks, hiring big-league stadiums, important foreign teams and coaches and, in the fashion of American industry, Madison Avenue consultants. It can be suspected that they are not devoted wholly to charity. They expect to get their money back, and more.

The biggest sparkle in the eyes of the promoters is traced to the prospect of television money. Many of the soccer franchise owners are in pro football and have an awareness of how much the networks can be tapped for if soccer catches on. The National Professional Soccer League, the one without international sanction, already has a contract with the Columbia Broadcasting System. It is called a $1 million pact for 10 years, but it has enough loopholes to be no worthwhile contract at all.

The United Soccer Association hopes to do better with its television sales, depending on its official sanction to win a better contract.

The 9,403 customers who responded for the Washington Whips' home debut against Cleveland fell far short of the expected 15,000 on the bright, clear night. It may have been that the game still is too new, and that the two teams came as strangers, before the fans could develop a proper rooting interest. Somebody to root for, or at least root against, is recognized as vital to attendance.

World Cup Few Cuts Above U.S. Fare

The crowd in Washington was immense compared to recent NPSL crowds in Yankee Stadium, where only 2,351 watched Baltimore play New York and 3,027 saw California play the New York team. True, a throng of 34,965 saw the USA's Houston team play Los Angeles, but that was in the Astrodome where even the bloodless bullfights are a draw, with the Dome as much an attraction as the contestants.

The World Cup final that had such charm for U.S. fans is more than a few cuts above what American fans have been getting, which may be the cause of some disenchantment. But the better guess is that the slow show of interest is due to other factors, including the game's newness and lack of body contact compared to America's pro football.

Somehow, the "saves" by a soccer goalie are not quite as thrilling to the genus American fan as the goal-line stand of a football team. Soccer's ultimate success in the U.S. may depend on whether Americans develop a grasp of the game before disinterest sets in. It may be a race between those two forces.

In New York the other night, the 0-0 game between the Baltimore and New York teams was booed by Americans as a dull game. America is a civilization which, until it learns the niceties of professional soccer, will demand more action. But the game is, after all, a transplant operation and must be given time.

English Side Bouyed By Boycott's Century

LEEDS, England (Reuters)—England touched depths of mediocrity against India in the first cricket test at Headingley Thursday and even a century by opener Geoff Boycott did not help to liven up the proceedings.

In fact, it was Boycott who brought the game almost to a standstill every time he faced the Indian attack. He took three hours to score 40 and his century came after 341 minutes.

At the close of play England was fairly well placed with 281 runs on the board for the loss of three wickets. Boycott's share was an unbeaten 106. Surrey batsman Ken Barrington was unlucky to run himself out when seven short of his century.

Barrington gave a fine exhibition against some good bowling and he left Boycott completely in the shade.

With the prospects of Boycott livening up today and Basil D'Oiveria, 19, not out at the close, chasing after runs, India could have another hard day in the field.

Lions Topple Nanaimo Club

Charlie Hardy pumped home four goals in a losing cause as Nanaimo Juniors suffered a 13-7 setback against Red Lion Inn during Senior "B" Lacrosse League action Thursday at Memorial Arena.

Ray Beech, Al McLean, Jim Cunningham and Ron Marshall each scored twice for the Lions. Red Larsen, Jim Galbraith, Pat Green, Tom Dheensaw and Stu Walker rounded out Victoria scoring.

Bill Beck, Lee Jeffs and Kenny Manns scored singles for Nanaimo

Steady Gordie Stops Kings As Ports Gain on Leaders

By TONY COSIER

When it comes to steadiness in the Senior Amateur Baseball League it would be hard to beat Gordie Strongman.

As a pitcher with Transport Workers, Strongman rarely has a bad inning. As a hitter, he usually gets good wood on a pitch.

The confident righthander performed with cool efficiency on the mound and at the plate Thursday at Royal Athletic Park while downing King's Hotel 6-1 to pick up his second win of the young season. Firing smoothly from a short-kicking, easy motion, Strongman scattered five hits, whiffed nine and walked only three.

STRUCK OUT 13

Tall John McKeachie tagged the most impressive Transport blast, breaking out of an early slump with a line-drive triple to spark a three-run rally in the eighth.

Two former Transports stood out for Kings Thursday. Pitcher Bruce McKenzie struck out 13 batters and walked just four. He fanned his former manager, Barry Harvey, three times in a row.

Keith Dagg, a Transport outfielder during the past few seasons, drove home Kings' only run in the third inning with his second single of the night.

New arrival Jim Leard, formerly of Greaves, also shone for Kings. Leard collected two hits, one a solid triple with nobody out in the top of the fourth. Strongman however, calmly retired the side in order and proceeded to breeze to the win.

Victory improved the Transports' grasp on second place and moved them within half a game of unbeaten Greaves Movers.

Duncan Golfer Tops Tourney

Dick White fired an even-par 35 on the last nine holes at the Royal Colwood course Thursday to capture top honors in the first annual Victoria hotel-motel golf tournament.

The Duncan hotelman finished with a seven-over-par 77 to beat out Keith Olson for the low-gross trophy.

George Laak took the handicap award with Bill Crawford in the runner-up spot.

Among the visitors in the 48-player tourney, Bert Saxon posted a 73 to beat out Hugh Thorburn for the low-gross award and handicap prizes went to Doug Peden and Bill Dunaway.

Red Lion Do Everything But a Victory Dance . . .

Red Lion had more hits, more men on bases, committed fewer errors than the opposition, but still didn't manage a victory dance in senior men's softball action Thursday at Central Park.

Geoff Hett held Carlings to two hits, while Red Lion hit Don Lyon and Dave Norman for three, but the winless Lions lost 3-0.

Carlings, now all alone in first place, scored their first run in the second inning when Norm Curran walked, advanced to third on two passed balls and came home on a fielder's choice.

Ken Griffin accounted for the second run in the fourth when his double sent Tom Hardy home.

LYON INJURED

Carlings scored their final run in the fifth when Len Anderson drove in Dave Norman with a single.

Norman, who assumed pitching duties for the winners in the fourth, gave up two hits. Starter Don Lyon was pitching a one-hitter when the knee injury which sidelined him for most of last season came back while he was advancing to second on a passed ball.

Luckies will try to catch up to Carlings tonight at Central Park. Luckies face Molsons at 6:45.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Salmon were on the move during the past week and they showed up in enough places around Vancouver Island to produce a flock of happy anglers.

Some of the happiest grins were at Campbell River, where the arrival of good concentrations of small coho last weekend snapped a lean period of several weeks. Mostly running between four and five pounds, the coho were hitting best around Cape Mudge and Butler Point. Chinook (spring) salmon up to 20 pounds were spicing the action at Duncan Bay.

Big chinooks have been making the news around the southern end of the Island and tacklebusters of better than 40 pounds are showing between Albert Head and Sheringham Point.

Bluebacks between two and four pounds appear plentiful between Oak Bay and Sooke, giving brisk action when they are in a biting mood.

However, it is the big ones that cause the excitement and George Goy had his share of fun Wednesday morning off Beechey Head, landing a 44-pound, six-ounce chinook and losing a couple of others, including one that looked even bigger than the fish he boated.

NEW FISH AT INLET

Anglers are also hitting a few big chinooks around the Victoria-Oak Bay waterfront and a new run of heavy salmon appears to have moved into Saanich Inlet.

Fishing in the Inlet was fairly good during the past few days. Most chinooks are running between eight and 12 pounds but a few in the over-20 class have been hooked and coho up to five pounds were hitting red lures in good numbers.

Deep fishing in Cowichan Bay has produced a few big chinooks like Sid Bottomly's 21-pounder and bluebacks have been active in Sansum Narrows.

LIMIT CATCHES

Some fair catches of blues have also been reported off Yellowpoint, Tent Island and Northwest Bay. Several limits have been taken around Gerald Island and French Creek, where the bite has been spasmodic. Good reports are also coming in from Deep Bay-Bowser waters.

Trout fishing has been fair to good in several areas. Cowichan Lake, Shawnigan Lake, Cowichan River and several lakes in the Campbell River section have produced good catches.

Bass fishing has been good in lakes and steelhead are showing in several west coast streams, including the Gold and Franklin rivers.

BERLIN (AP) — West Germany eliminated Canada from the Federation Cup tennis championship Thursday when Helga Schultze defeated Faye Urban, Windsor, Ont., and Helga Niessen defeated Susan Butt, Vancouver.

The cup decides the women's team championship of the world.

Youthful Centre Star With Scots

VANCOUVER—John Calliog, the spectacular 20-year-old centre forward, will be the glamor player when the touring Scottish national soccer team faces the Vancouver All-Stars here Saturday night at 8.

Calliog, who plays with Sheffield Wednesday, scored the winning goal when the Scottish side defeated England 3-2 in an April match.

It was England's first defeat since winning the World Cup last summer and the skill displayed drew glowing praise from the Scottish press.

However, Calliog is the only member of that team with the national club currently touring North America.

PLAYERS UNAVAILABLE

Glasgow Rangers and Glasgow Celtic were both involved in European competitions and were unable to release players for the tour. Also, Dundee, Dundee United, Hiberbian and Aberdeen are competing in the new United Soccer Association mini-league.

One of the greatest Scots, Jim Baxter, is playing with his league club, Sunderland, for Vancouver in the mini-league.

The tourists still have a powerful club and are favored over the Vancouver stars, who will go with the same players who lost 5-2 to Chelsea two weeks ago.

Scottish players are:

Jim Cruickshank (Hearts), Harry Thomson (Burnley); Willie Callaghan (Dunfermline), Hugh Tinney (Burnley); Ian Ure (Arsenal), John Woodward (Arsenal), Jim Townsend (Hearts), Alan Anderson (Hearts), Doug Fraser (West Bromwich), Eddie Colquhon (West Bromwich); Willie Morgan (Burnley), Harry Hood (Clyde), John McCalliog (Sheffield Wednesday), Joe Harper (Huddersfield), Andy Penman (Rangers), Bobby Hope (West Bromwich), Alex Ferguson (Dunfermline).

CHINESE BLOCKADE BRITISH MISSION

PEKING (Reuters) — Red Guards blockaded the British diplomatic mission and residence of the charge d'affaires here today, preventing celebrations to mark the official birthday of Queen Elizabeth.

Cordons of Red Guards turned back foreign ambassadors and diplomats as they attempted to enter the grounds of the residence.

. . . NASSER

"I am assuming full responsibility for this tragedy."

"The forces of imperialism believe that Gamal Abdel Nasser is their only enemy," he said. "I want it to be clear before them that it is the entire Arab nation and not just Gamal Abdel Nasser alone."

Even as Nasser spoke, there was the wail of sirens as an air raid alert was sounded. However, it appeared nothing had happened and no firing was heard.

Earlier Friday, Egypt charged that Israeli planes despite the cease-fire, had bombed targets in the Suez Canal Zone and that Israeli armor had staged an attack "west of the Suez."

"We must admit there has been a relapse, a crisis facing the nation today," Nasser told the people.

"I am ready to bear the full and entire responsibility. Therefore I have taken a decision."

At this point in his speech, Nasser announced his decision to resign and appoint Mohieddin in his place.

Mohieddin, 45, has been serving as a vice-president and earlier was premier. He had been Nasser's chief trouble shooter since the beginning of the current Mideast crisis and has traveled on missions to Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Syria and Kuwait.

BUSINESS SUIT

Nasser was wearing a dark business suit as he appeared on television and radio.

He said Israel's air force was three times as large as Egypt's when it came to the actual fighting and said "there is no doubt that aircraft from U.S. and British carriers off Israel's coast" were involved."

He praised the Egyptian armed forces, saying they had "done a great job" and had made a "great stand."

Nasser, who spoke for 20 minutes from his office at the Republic Palace, told of Israeli threats against Syria which he said had prompted the crisis, and then of Arab heroism in the fighting.

'FANTASTIC ARSENAL'

Nasser said the Arab military collapse was a result of the "fantastic arsenal with which Israel was supplied."

Nasser took over from Gen. Mohammed Naguib on Feb. 22, 1954, and formally became president in 1956, the year he touched off the Suez crisis with his nationalization of the Suez Canal.

Nasser steered his country on a course of "non-alignment" in the east-west power struggle, accepting aid from both the United States and the Soviet Union. But relations with Washington deteriorated steadily in recent years and he moved ever closer to the Moscow camp.

During his 13 years in power, Nasser ended 74 years of British occupation, nationalized the Suez Canal, led his nation's defence in the 1956 Anglo-French-Israeli invasion, united Egypt briefly with Syria in the United Arab Republic and took the lead in attempts to unify the Arab nations.

. . . ISRAEL

the armistice line."

At 9:30 a.m. EDT, Thant said, an UNTSO message first confirmed Israeli bombing north and east of Lake Tiberias (the Sea of Galilee). The message said "bombing, napalming and strafing" of the village of Squofiye was in progress and heavy explosions were heard north of the inland sea.

At 9:46 a.m. EDT, he reported, Bull said he could confirm bombing in the vicinity of Damascus and two minutes later another message said Syria reported 200 Israeli aircraft in the area north of Lake Tiberias, with Israeli troop movements as far away as the village of Qunitra.

In the past Israel has used planes to bomb and strafe the Syrian artillery but in the opening stages of the five-day-old war it concentrated its full military might against Jordan and Egypt, crushing those armies, while alomst contemptuously ignoring the Syrian threat.

The Egyptian announcement today that fighting had ended in the main zone along the Suez Canal came about three hours after the Egyptians charged the Israelis with launching new attacks.

The Israelis had moved their tanks to the east bank of the canal this morning.

Israeli military spokesmen said that Israeli forces holding key points along the east bank moved to crush a "last-ditch" assault of Egyptian infantry units in the Ismailia sector.

They said fighting was fierce in this central sector of the canal.

The waves of Egyptian assault were thrown back, and the desperate Egyptian attack was repulsed, the sources added.

TRAPPED NEAR CANAL

But the remnants of Egyptian armor—estimated at 700 tanks of all types in the western part of the peninsula—were trapped by the Israeli deployment along the canal routes.

The fate of the tanks is sealed, Israeli sources said.

They will have to surrender, an Israeli military source said.

The Egyptian high command charged that "Israeli enemy forces, supported by the forces of imperialism, are continuing their attacks against our forces" west of the canal despite the ceasefire.

Preliminary reports about this morning's Egyptian attempts to break through the stranglehold line on the canal came from the west in the Ismailia region.

Egypt agreed to the ceasefire late Thursday a few hours after Israel announced it had sealed off the four main exits out of the Sinai to the canal, apparently bottling up the Egyptian forces still east of the canal.

Five hours after the Egyptian announcement, Syria said it, too, would abide by a ceasefire.

Saanich Asked To Reconsider Withdrawal

Saanich will continue to be served by Greater Victoria Industrial Development Research Commission despite the municipality's withdrawal last month.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce commission have decided to ask Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis and council to reconsider their decision to drop out.

Chairman Clyde Savage said: "I would hate to lose Saanich from this industrial commission and would suggest that we would be of more help to them than they to us.

"It was quite a shock to me to have it dumped like this."

OTHERS AT LOSS

Commission members representing Oak Bay, Victoria, the chamber and visitors' bureau, were at a loss to explain the Saanich move, other than to infer that it was done for economy in annual budget trimming.

Of the $3,000 commission budget, Victoria pays the biggest share of about $1,200, followed by $1,113 from Saanich, $400 from Oak Bay and $260 from Esquimalt.

Coun. Ed Lum, of Saanich had already been appointed vice-chairman of the commission before the withdrawal which included the Saanich delegate.

"I don't see the point of this at all," commented chamber vice-president William Armstrong. "I am sure any inquiries for them would come through us, and we would be working for them for nothing anyway."

Mr. Savage said the amount of money involved as the Saanich contribution was of little importance since it represented "peanuts" in the municipal budget.

HARD TO UNDERSTAND

Mr. Armstrong suggested there is more reason for Saanich belonging to the commission than Oak Bay, which permits no industry.

He said it was hard to understand why Saanich would pull out at this point in the development of Greater Victoria.

It didn't matter whether individual municipalities gain as long as development "contributes to a healthy community," Mr. Armstrong said.

A brochure covering all industrial opportunities in the capital region is being prepared for distribution in late summer.

VETERANS HONORED NEXT WEEK

Veterans' Week in B.C. begins Sunday under a recent provincial government proclamation, in conjunction with similar decrees across Canada.

The cabinet order said the designation is in honor of the veterans of four wars since Confederation—the Nile Expedition and Boer War; the First and Second World Wars, and the Korean conflict, in which Canadians fought for the United Nations.

Students Drafted

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — The central government today drafted university students into the army for the first time. The move was part of the general mobilization ordered for a possible military showdown with Nigeria's secessionist eastern region.

12 Trying to Be First Canadians to Win Cup

By SHIRLEY HEWETT

Hewett

Twelve of Victoria's sailing experts have their racing sights set on a silver soup tureen with a history. This trophy was originally presented to the family of Admiral Lord Nelson by Sultan Selim III to commemorate the Battle of the Nile in 1797, when the British defeated the French fleet. Since its donation in 1952, the tureen has symbolized men's North American Sailing supremacy.

It is the Mallory Cup.

Part of its prestige lies in the conditions of the test. Each year, all preliminary eliminations as well as the finals use a different type of boat, which is always a three-man boat using a spinnaker. Thus, no one can build up an advantage through familiarity with a certain design. When the North American finals are held this August in Montreal, they will be sailed in Canada's newest racing class, the Sabre Scow. The Scow's designer, Montreal yachtsman Roger Hewson, crewed with one of last year's Mallory finalists, Canadian Olympic helmsman Ed Botterell.

The Vancouver Island Mallory elimination series will be sailed this Saturday and Sunday at Cadboro Bay, using Cal 20's. The weekend winner will represent B.C. in Seattle next month, then area "H" trials are held. (Area H comprises B.C., Washington, and Oregon). Our contest is of special interest because it pits four top helmsmen and crews who do not normally race against one another.

RCNSA will be represented by one team: Leigh Holland, Mel Steffens, and Nigel Robertson. They are top men in planning dinghy circles. RVYC has three entries: Bob Grundison, Dick Moore and Gordie Nickells, from the Thunderbird Fleet; Jack Woodward, Gordie Inglis and Gerry Anderson of the Cub Fleet; and Ned Ashe, Norman Marcus and Jeremy Hewett, who are equally at home in centreboarders or keel boats. Skipper Jack Woodward has already taken a team twice to the are "H" eliminations, placing a highly creditable second in both the 1966 and 1965 competitions.

Previous winners of the Mallory Cup read like a sailing "Who's Who". In 1952, Cornelius Shields; in 1953, James DeWitt; in 1965, Cornelius Shields, Jr. And in 1955, the man who scored the triple Swiftsure win last month in Mara, William Buchan, Jr.

A Canadian has never won the Mallory Cup. But the winner from Victoria can be counted on to give it a fighting try.

★ ★ ★

Two other local teams will sail off in "Area H" eliminations next month. In the under 18 age bracket, RVYC Junior skipper Louise Anstey will be aiming for the Sears Cup. Louise, with her crew of Barb White and Dave Carere has already won the Victoria eliminations, which were sailed in Flying Juniors. Last weekend, they took the Vancouver Island eliminations, which were sailed at Maple Bay in Lightnings. The nex. step is Seattle.

The Sears finals will be held at Hudson, Ontario in Sharks. As in the Mallory, competitions are always sailed in three man boats with spinnakers.

★ ★ ★

Going uncontested from Victoria into Area H eliminations for the Adams Cup, the ladies' equivalent of Mallory, will be Shirley Jefferson with crewmates Judy Peetz and Pat Dufour. As in the Mallory, both the 1965 and 1966 Victoria teams placed second in the area finals. Lady helmsmen respectively were Jill Spear of RCNSA and Marguerite Townshend of RVYC.

★ ★ ★

One of the highlights on the Capital City Yacht Club's Calendar goes this Saturday. It's the Rolly Halls Predicted Log Race, which last year saw fifteen boats navigate to a predicted schedule. This year's contest starts at the Bell Buoy off Coal Island and follows a course by Canoe Rock (1st check point), Gowland Point, South Pender Island (2nd check point), Plumper Sound, Navy Channel to Conconi Reef. The finish point is Peel Point at the North end of Prevost Island. Following the race, boats will rendezvous at Scott Point Marina for a crab feed.

SHORT TACKS: Bill Scott has sold his sloop Coral A and leaves soon for England to pick up a larger motor sailer, which he plans to bring back via Panama. . . . There's a "hot-rod" Cobra entered for the RIYA when Sid Halls launches his Jack Knights design, it will mark his return to the racing circuit. Sid has manned the RVYC Committee Boat for two summer seasons . . . Ned Ashe and Norman Marcus, team mates this coming weekend, were competitors in the Royals Regatta sailed in Dragons at Montreal some ten years ago. This round robin saw Prince Philip's "Bluebottle" participating in a series for all the "Royal" Yacht Clubs in Canada. Ned's RVYC teammates were Peter Young and Jorgen Baess. Norm represented the Royal Kennebecasis Yacht Club from St. John, New Brunswick.

50 New Faces Picketing At Rupert

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Police patrolling docks here Thursday noticed an estimated 50 "new faces" of men who arrived by air earlier in the day.

The strangers stationed themselves in positions previously manned by UFAWU picketers at the Prince George Fishermen's Co-Operative. They were not carrying placards.

Earlier this week four UFAWU officials were charged with disobeying a court injunction. One of the four was re-arrested Thursday when he appeared at the Co-Op where picketers were parading.

HOLD-OUTS HOLD UP NEW SCHOOL

Four "hold-outs" in the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal project stand between planners and the start of an urgently-needed replacement for North Ward School.

City planner Geoffrey Greenhalgh said today that preliminary subsoil test drilling can commence at any time, even though the four properties needed to round out the building site have not been secured. Negotiations continue, but if time drags on, expropriation may be ordered.

He said about two acres is needed for the $575,000 school to stand on, and the remainder of the 7-acre site, including playing fields, can come any time during the year required to erect the building.

Young Artist Repeating Carr Story

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

Up in Comox is a young woman who is repeating, in her own way, the early story of the renowned Canadian artist, Emily Carr.

Her name Mrs. William H. Heybroek, to be formal.

She is self-trained, and her medium is the ancient Indian totems of Vancouver Island and, particularly, northern British Columbia.

* * *

Like Emily Carr, this young artist "takes off" each summer for the north country and the Indian villages up there. Unlike the renowned artist she does not live "on location," nor does she take along a dog or a monkey for company.

She travels in her own car and she makes her headquarters at Hazelton's Inlander Hotel with Polly and Bill Sargeant, well-known for their interest in Indian culture and their work to restore the totems of Kitwanga and Kitwancool.

Once settled in Hazelton, Sandy Heybroek goes every morning to one or other of the villages in the area. She sets up her easel wherever she finds the poles and she paints there until the light dims. Then she returns to Hazelton for the night.

"I like to finish a painting in the field," she says, "but if weather conditions are against me, I do a sketch and complete it at home."

She uses a felt pen for her sketches "because it is soft and yet it is firm." At the same time she concedes that 'it leaves very little margin for error."

* * *

Bill Heybroek, actually started his wife on the road to her present vocation by showing her a beautifully illustrated book on totems. When Sandy studied it she developed "a terrific wish" to paint the poles. She confiscated some of Bill's paints and brushes and went to work.

It wasn't long before she found it frustrating to copy totems from a book. "I knew I would have to get out and discover the poles myself and paint as I found them."

She started at Alert Bay and Beaver Cove. But it was the northland that attracted her and it is to the north that she most frequently returns.

* * *

Since her first visit to Hazelton, Sandy has "done the back roads" around Burns Lake and Francois Lake. She has jogged her car in to Kitsequecla and along the Naas River to Kitsegas. She has been a visitor at Kitwancool, Kispiox and Kitwanga. And she has "looked at Aiyansh from the far side of the river ... but it was getting late and I had to go back without crossing to visit it."

This August, when she goes north, Aiyansh is on her itinerary and she hopes to paint there.

Traveling alone is no problem for this intrepid young artist any more than it was for Emily Carr years ago.

The Indians are "shy but very kind" and are always ready to help in any way they can. Indian children make friends quickly and in some instances "slow up the work" as they cluster around to watch and to offer gifts of flowers, berries and food.

Petite, feminine Sandy learned quickly that, when she took her car over the back roads, she would have to change her own tires. She carries two spares but so far has not had to use "both at the same time."

When she paints she uses oils and she likes to do "a fair size" canvas. Anything less than 16 by 20 doesn't interest her.

* * *

She believes her work is "much too realistic" to interest the galleries. At the same time she has had shows in Courtenay and in Port Alberni that have won popular acclaim and has been successful in selling paintings.

This year she doesn't expect to have a show because she hasn't been able to "hold" a big enough collection. This in itself speaks well for her work.

Some persons think the spirit that urged Emily Carr is a thing of the past.

But Sandy Heybroek belies that notion and proves that the determination to find and preserve on canvas the story of British Columbia's Indians is still very much alive.

Taxi Driver To Face Trial

Bedry Committed on Charge Of Attempted Murder of Woman

A senior city police officer testified Thursday he fired a shot through a slowly closing door after another officer beside him had been wounded by a burst of gunfire from a surrounded house.

Insp. Lester Clark was giving evidence at a preliminary hearing into an attempted murder charge against Frank Bedry, 39-year-old city taxi driver.

Bedry earlier in the day was committed to trial before a higher court on a similar charge arising from an earlier shooting incident May 4 in which an Esquimalt woman was wounded.

HEARING CONTINUES

The hearing on the second charge, involving the wounding of Constable Harry Hoshal in Bedry's house at 572 John St., continues today.

Insp. Clark told the court Thursday that he and Hoshal had entered the rear door of Bedry's house after repeated calls for the accused to come out had gone unheeded.

After the inspector kicked open a second door, the officers spotted a butcher knife which had been jammed in the casing apparently to block the door.

As Constable Hoshal plucked the knife from the woodwork and reached to drop it on top of a nearby refrigerator, the first of four rapid shots struck him under the arm.

The door started to close slowly, said the inspector. He stepped back and fired one shot through it from his .38-calibre service pistol before stepping outside and calling for reinforcements.

Constable Hoshal was rushed to hospital in a police cruiser. He later underwent surgery and has since been released.

FIRED TEAR GAS

Constable Blake Green described for the hearing how he fired tear gas shells through five windows in the John Street house.

After a 15 or 20-minute wait he said he saw the front door open and a man lying there. He identified Bedry as the man he pulled from the house.

Inspector Clark said he searched the gas-filled one-storey frame building immediately, using a fire department air mask, and found no one else.

Six more Crown witnesses are scheduled to be heard as the second hearing continues today. A total of 30 witnesses will then have given evidence in the two hearings, including ballistic and identification experts and the officers who conducted the stakeout on Bedry's house the night of the two shootings.

During the first hearing Thursday, Mrs. Molly Robertson of 911 McNaughton identified Bedry as the man who stepped from the bushes beside her home early May 4. She was wounded by shots in the leg and body from a .22-calibre rifle.

A cashier at a downtown restaurant, she said she had known Bedry about eight years.

Rest Home Workers 'Easy to Organize'

Employees at two or three rest homes in Greater Victoria could be quickly organized into unions, the Victoria Labour Council was told Wednesday night.

The information came from Don Sykes, president of the Three Cees — a group which split from the Canadian Corps of Commissionaires. He said he has 6½ years psychiatric nursing experience.

The private hospitals charged $300 and up and in many cases the care was "nothing more than room and board."

They were run with the minimum of registered nurses and used "cheap labor" which they called nurses aides. These aides, who did excellent work, suffered back pains because of heavy lifting they have to do — generally on their own.

The legal minimum wage of $1.10 an hour was seldom exceeded even though the aides performed efficiently, often assuming responsibility that should be that of registered nurses.

The labor council decided to refer the letter to its organization committee.

Professors Appointed By University

A Formosan physicist recently at the University of Pennsylvania is one of three new assistant professors appointed to the physics department of the University of Victoria.

Dr. Chi-Shiang Wu, 36, will join the group planning a cyclotron to be used jointly by B.C.'s three universities.

Dr. Donald E. Lobb, 26, of Saskatoon, a post-doctoral fellow at the Institute fur Plasmaphysik in Julich, Germany last year, will join the same group.

Dr. Fred Cooperstock, 26, a native of Winnipeg, who for the past year was a post-doctoral fellow at Dublin Institute for Advanced Studies, has also been appointed.

Failing to Remain Costs Driver $200

Mark Poulsen, 533 Comerford, was fined $200 in traffic court Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Poulsen was located by police three days after he hit a car on Craigflower May 5 and kept on going, court was told.

Magistrate Byers said he would also recommend the accused lose his driving privileges for two months after hearing Poulsen had 11 traffic convictions and five licence suspensions in the past four years.

Cafe Break-In

The cigarette machine at Chef Anthony's, 312 Cook, was ransacked in the early hours this morning.

A policeman on patrol about 4 a.m. noticed the rear door had been forced.

The machine had been moved from the south wall to near the rear entrance and the front pried open.

An undetermined amount of money and cigarettes was taken.

ser of the United Arab Republic as saying that his objective was to destroy Israel and "I cannot be neutral" about that.

"The Arabs no longer trust us. The Israelis wonder about us. It will take a long time for Canada to have restored to it the respect and regard of African and Asian races."

Mr. Pearson said the fact that the UN Emergency Force had kept the peace between Israel and the Arab states for 10½ years since the Suez crisis of 1956 was evidence that such forces should be continued and made stronger.

Mr. Diefenbaker rejected this. "Much is said about the UNEF force and that it maintained the peace in the Middle East. It maintained nothing of the kind. . . . It was simply an international body with a supervising capacity but without the ability to direct, order or enforce."

PRIORITY

Mr. Pearson recommended both immediate and long-term steps for the Middle East. He gave four items immediate priority:

—Observation by all parties of the ceasefire resolution passed unanimously by the UN Security Council.

—Freedom of access for all ships in the Gulf of Aqaba.

—Action to open the Suez Canal to Israeli shipping, closed to them by the U.A.R. since the 1956 clash.

—Interposition of a UN force between Israel and the Arab states.

WARNING ISSUED

Mr. Pearson said Israel had served clear warnings in 1956 that any closure of the Gulf of Aqaba would be taken as a hostile act. This was the sparking point for the recent fighting.

If there were arguments the gulf might not be an international waterway, these could be brought up before the International Court of Justice. But meantime there should be no claim by any border state on the waterway and it should be open to all ships.

The prime minister suggested a demilitarized zone separating the antagonists could cut down the incidents of border-crossing infiltration and terrorism that had been a prelude to the outbreak of open war between the U.A.R. and Israel.

But the UN Security Council would have to shoulder the responsibility, never met during the last 10 years, of seeking a permanent political solution to the Arab-Israeli problem.

Israel, surrounded by Arab states, feared that someday she might be over-run. The Arab states feared that Israel, with her continuing flow of refugees from other countries, would embark on territorial conquest to find more living space.

A solid political agreement had to be found to resolve the fears of both sides.

Both the Liberal and Conservative leaders touched on the problem of the Arab refugees who have been occupying camps since the state of Israel was established.

Mr. Diefenbaker described the camps as "a blot on civilization." Mr. Pearson said the 1,250,000 refugees had been used as "pawns in the game of Middle East politics" and their plight must be part of any permanent settlement of the problem.

THIS LAWN WELL WATERED

SEATTLE (AP) — The freighter Chena is on the high seas with Walter O. Kraft's new front lawn.

The sodden ship sailed Thursday night with 6,000 feet of turf, sent from a nearby grass farm for the lawn of Kraft's new home at Kodiak, Alaska.

The strips of sod will be kept in vans cooled to 33 degrees for the five-day trip.

Moscow Kept in Touch As 'Hot Line' Baptized

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson and Soviet Premier Kosygin made unprecedented efforts—even using the "hot line"—to try to limit the Middle East war and bring the fighting to a quick end.

For the first time a U.S. president and a Soviet premier exchanged messages over the hot-line teletype circuit between Moscow and Washington.

It was opened four years ago following the confrontation between President John F. Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev in the 1962 Cuban missile crisis.

Kosygin sent the first Middle East message to Johnson early Monday after Israeli and Arab armies clashed, the White House disclosed Thursday.

The Soviet premier, it was learned, suggested the world's two great powers should work together in the interest of peace. It is understood his message affirmed what he said in an earlier note to the president—that the Soviet government did not want war in the Middle East.

Johnson replied to Kosygin the same day, also using the hot line, George Christian, White House press officer, reported.

Christian did not disclose the content of the president's response, but it was reported to have welcomed Kosygin's interest in limiting the war and bringing it to a quick conclusion.

Another series of messages were exchanged Thursday after the president learned of an Israeli attack on the U.S. naval research ship Liberty off the Egyptian coast. The ship was damaged severely, 10 persons were killed, and planes of the U.S. 6th Fleet were ordered airborne immediately.

Knowing that Soviet radar would pick up the takeoff of the aircraft—Soviet ships watch the 6th Fleet—Johnson sent a message to Kosygin over the hot line. The president reported the attack on the Liberty and placed the Soviet leader on the alert.

Arthur Mayse

Like many another husband who enjoys a happy marriage, I sometimes look back along the road we have travelled together and thank the powers for diverting a variety of tigers from our door.

One of these is starvation, which might have been our fate had we not found the sense to enlarge our contract by an extra clause.

This stipulated that my dear one would take the task of administering our finances out of my hands.

We have clung to that arrangement ever since, good times and bad, and I would as soon have the roof fall in than depart from it. It might not work in your menage, but it does in ours, for a reason which I am perfectly ready to confess.

Time and experience have only served to underline the fact that I'm no better equipped to handle money than a monkey.

Nor am I alone in this failing. There is, in fact, a breed of men who without conscious effort, can take a ten-spot and shrink it to a nickel and three pennies before you can say "Waste not, want not."

★

By the end of our first wedded month, I had managed to demonstrate my prowess as a money-melter so effectively that with payday still a week off, our funds were reduced to nine cents.

Confronted by this situation, Win accepted it calmly. She searched her handbag and came up with a tarnished nickel ... mine never stuck with me long enough to tarnish.

"We have some potatoes," she said, "and sausage is 14 cents at the corner market. We'll see how far we can stretch a pound."

So off I went, jingling our fortune in my pocket, to the market a block away. The meat counter was crowded, but finally it came my turn.

The butcher wrapped a pound of sausage, I brought out my money, and found that it had shrunk in transit, by a process that still baffles me, to 13 cents.

I was counting again, hoping against hope that the total would come out right this time, when my ears caught a whisper from behind:

"That poor boy ... He hasn't enough ..."

Then a matronly hand reached past my elbow, and deposited another penny in my palm.

Shaken, I fled with our sausages, which with the aid of a minute but timely cheque from a Sunday school paper publisher, saw us through. And on pay-day, at my suggestion, we added that clause to our marriage vows.

★

All this was quite some time ago, as the 14-a-pound sausage price will indicate to anyone who keeps an eye on the food ads. Although there have been months when I backslid, the mere suggestion that perhaps it would be better if I took care of the accounts has worked instant reformation.

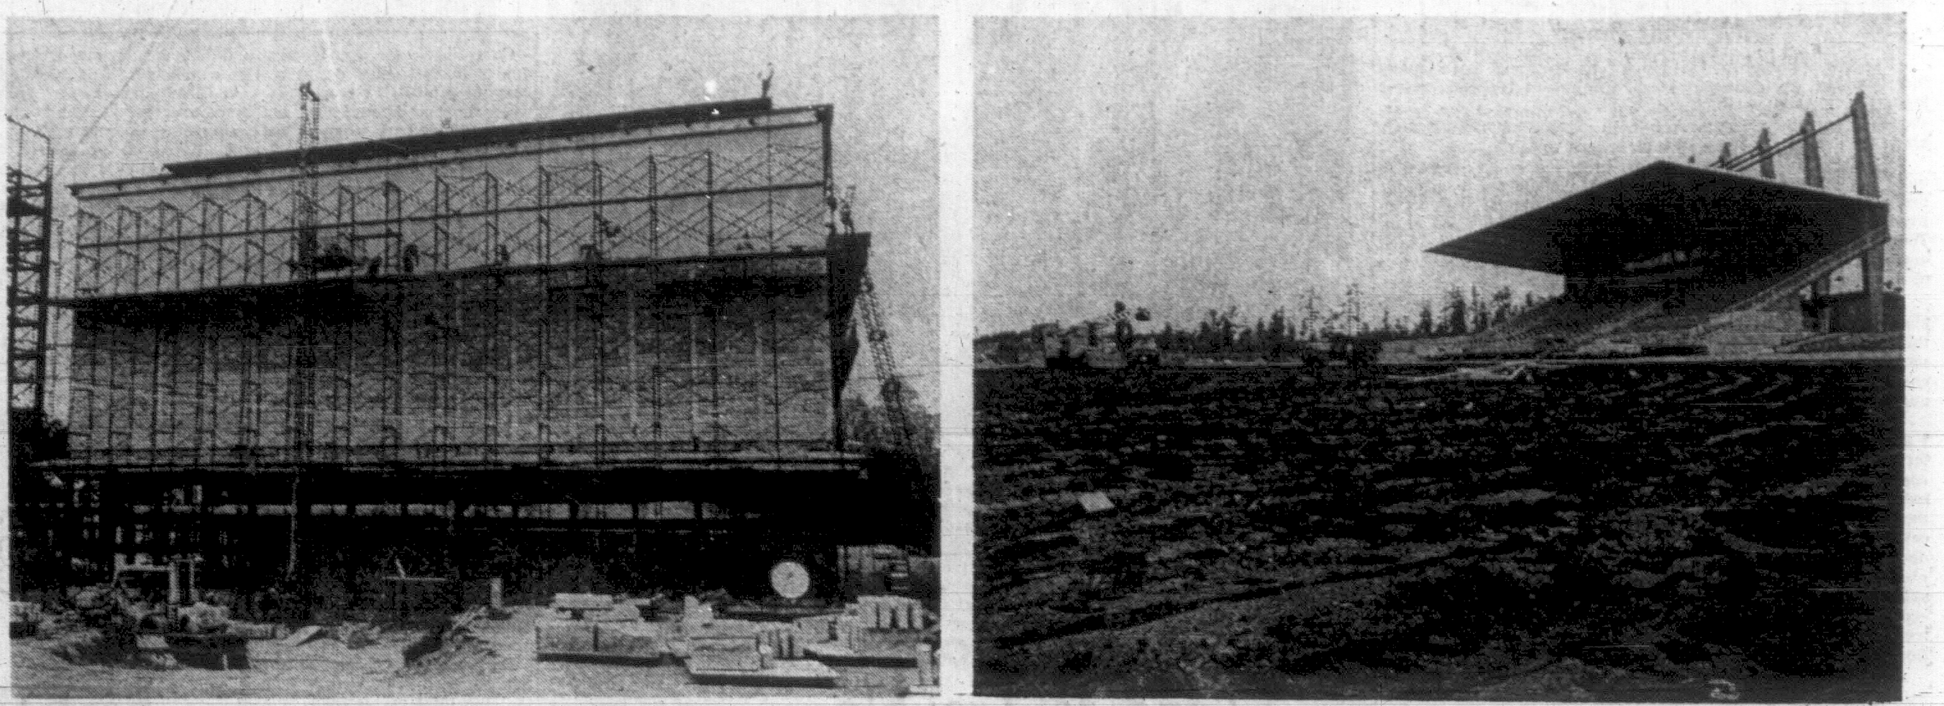
All too well, I can see myself still hopelessly struggling to cope with one set of bills while another is wadded forgotten in my pocket and a third is already on the way.

One time or another, along with a great many men who have learned where the business brains are in the family, I run into an exaggerated he-man type who scoffs at this delegating of responsiblity as a Milquetoast tactic.

Not so: it is merely a sensible return to the natural division of labor. It is for man, the hunter, to bag the elusive buck; but when he fetches it home, his duty is accomplished.

Naturally — and I add this as a warning — the administration clause that works so wel' for so many isn't for everyone.

The too-easy spender whose wife also happens to be a money-melter had better hang tough, hope for the best, and keep a batch of candles handy for when they cut the power.



Makeup and Breakup to Add Splendor to Centennial Projects

Workmen are busy this week giving the treatment to two of Victoria's centennial projects.

Operation Face Blender has started on Centennial Museum and Operation Facelift is well under way at Centennial Stadium.

The museum is being covered with the same stone that decorates the Legislative Buildings. Lower courses are of Nelson Island granite but most of the rock veneer is sandstone from the Haddington Island quarry specifically re-opened for this $375,000 operation.

Both islands are near Alert Bay.

White marble will fill the vertical spaces. Newly-cut stone veneer has revived talk of steam-cleaning nearly 70 years of grime coating the Legislative Building exterior.

Meanwhile at the University of Victoria the smooth blacktop laid for the Centennial Tattoo has taken on a plowed field appearance.

The blacktop was laid because there wasn't time to plant grass and attain an adequate turf.

The cost of laying and removing the blacktop—about $10,000—is being paid by the federal government.

The blacktop being removed will be used as fill for a new road connecting Ruby Road with the Ring Road, which surrounds the university campus.

Youth Jailed On Drug Count

18 Months for Trafficking; 'Wish You Well,' Says Judge

A 19-year-old Victorian, who had never been in trouble with the police before, was today sentenced to 18 months definite and 18 months indefinite in the Young Offenders' Unit at Oakalla jail.

Roger F. Hunter, 19, of 724 Yates Street, had been found guilty of being in possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

"I am concerned for your welfare and I personally wish you well," Mr. Justice Victor Dryer told Hunter after passing sentence in B.C. Assize Court here.

"The term you will actually serve will depend on how you act and on your attitude. I am being as lenient with you as I possibly can."

Hunter—a dark, neatly dressed youth— did not speak, but his counsel, Alan Bigelow, said he was "humbly and deeply sorry."

"He assures me this will never happen again," Mr. Bigelow said.

A jury of three women and nine men returned a verdict of guilty of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking at 10:55 Thursday night.

Jury Deliberated for 12 Hours

The jury had deliberated on its verdict for nearly 12 hours. It had to consider the charge in two stages—first, possession, then trafficking.

Mr. Bigelow called four character witnesses all of whom spoke of Hunter as a youth of good character who had never been in trouble before.

Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley, minister of Fairfield United Church, said:

"This is something I don't understand. He is not the kind of boy who would normally be in trouble. He is mannerly, quiet and not troublesome at all."

Mr. Bigelow said Hunter had never been charged or convicted of any offence before.

"This is a first offence, and it is my submission that he has been mixing with the wrong people. It is most unlikely that he will ever commit such an offence again."

Mr. Bigelow added that Hunter had been in custody since April 20 when he was arrested with some other youths at an abandoned house at Ten-Mile Point.

Crown counsel Rodney Taylor said a sentence in the penitentiary would be appropriate but, because of Hunter's youth, he was eligible for treatment in the Young Offenders' Unit.

Life in Prison Maximum Term

Mr. Justice Dryer told Hunter the maximum sentence for trafficking in drugs is life imprisonment.

"I want to make you realize that the people of Canada consider this a very serious crime. We are all subject to these laws and you are no exception. If you were an adult, I would sentence you to a long term of imprisonment.

"At 19 you are not quite an adult, but you are getting close to the time when you must accept responsibility for your actions.

"You look younger than 19 and it may be you are younger than 19 so far as wisdom is concerned. Some people grow up more quickly than others.

"Several good people have come forward to speak for you and you owe something to them as well as to the community."

Earlier in the trial, RCMP Constable Donald Kennedy told of disguising himself as a prisoner named "Wes Freeman" and conversing with Hunter in the cells at Saanich police station.

He said Hunter told him, if he ever wanted to make easy money, he could sell marijuana to teeny-boppers (youths in their early teens).

The jury first left the court at 11:44 a.m. Thursday after hearing an hour-long charge from Mr. Justice Dryer. It returned at 12:48 and asked the judge for a legal definition of the term "possession."

A verdict of guilty of possession was returned at 4:05 p.m.

Crown counsel Taylor and defence counsel Bigelow then addressed the jury on the second part of the charge — trafficking.

Mr. Justice Dryer again addressed the jury on the second part. The jury retired at 5:05 p.m. and returned at 5:50 p.m. to ask further questions of the judge on points of law and hear the transcript of evidence given by RCMP Constable Kennedy.

Woman Seeks $705 Damages From Doctors

Claims Wrist Jammed In Operating Table

A Courtenay woman is claiming damages from The Sisters of St. Ann and three Victoria surgeons for injuries sustained during an operation at St. Joseph's Hospital on Jan. 14, 1964.

St. Joseph's is operated by the Sisters of St. Ann.

Mrs. Gladys Knight, the wife of Percy N. Knight, claims her right wrist was jammed and crushed in some part of the operating table mechanism while she was undergoing an operation for laminectomy (protruding disc).

In Victoria Law Courts Thursday, Gerald Lauder, her counsel, asked Mr. Justice George Gregory to award Mrs. Knight special damages of $705 to cover medical expenses resulting from her injury.

Mr. Lauder also asked for unspecified general damages because of "extensive pain and suffering" caused.

Lloyd McKenzie is appearing for St. Joseph's Hospital; E. E. Hinkson for Dr. Rudolph Anderson, Dr. Neville Grant and Dr. Harold Carter, all orthopedic surgeons.

Mr. Lauder said Dr. Grant was her physican and the operation was performed by Dr. Anderson and Dr. Carter.

The operation was carried out at her own request and she agreed to pay the regular medical fees.

JAMMED, CRUSHED

On recovering from anaesthesia, Mrs. Knight learned that her wrist had been jammed and crushed in some part of the operating table mechanism, owned and used by the hospital.

Mr. Lauder said the mechanism caused damage to her right arm, wrist and hand and to the nerve system in her right arm and hand.

He alleged that the operating table was in a negligent condition, or was negligently and unskilfully handled, used or operated.

Mr. Lauder claimed the hospital and its surgeons were responsible for all equipment in the operating room.

Mr. Justice Gregory interposed.

"I am inclined to the view that the hospital and its doctors are entitled to rely on the competence of the anaesthetist to see that a patient is properly placed on the operating table."

Mr. Justice Gregory reserved judgment.

Escaping Charges Withdrawn

Charges of escaping lawful custody and unlawfully being at large were withdrawn in central court today in order not to upset deportation proceedings against the accused.

Josef Moche Benes, 29, at William Head prison following a three-year sentence for bank robbery, escaped early Tuesday morning and was caught Thursday morning. He admitted the charges and said he was anxious to get back to his homeland to fight for Israel.

Crown prosecutor John Macintyre, asking for withdrawal of the charges, said that further sentence would mean the deportation proceedings would be interrupted.

He said Benes would be charged by prison authorities with "walking away" from custody, an offence which called for internal handling and would not hamper the deportation proceedings.

Motorcycle Show

A motorcycle display will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in Beaver Lake Park in Saanich opposite Haliburton Road.

The display will be staged by the Victoria Motorcycle Club and is sponsored by the Saanich Centennial Committee.

Court Rejects Dismissal Bid

Shooting Trial Ordered

See Earlier Story Page 16

A plea for dismissal on the grounds intent had not been proved in an attempted murder charge was rejected by Magistrate William Ostler in central court this morning.

He committed taxi driver Frank Bedry for trial in a higher court.

The defence motion was made by W. A. Woods at the end of a comparatively brief preliminary hearing in which no defence was offered and no cross examination was made.

The charge arose from the wounding of Constable Harry Hoshal at 572 John Street, on May 4, when city police laid siege to the house and were held at bay by a man with a gun.

Constable Hoshal, now recovering from a bullet wound in his abdomen, told the court he went to the house with Inspector Lester Clark. Both were in uniform and day was just breaking.

NO RESPONSE

Several times the officers called Bedry to come out but there was no response. They entered the house and Constable Hoshal said he saw a knife with a bent blade sticking in the door jamb. He removed it and as he placed it on a nearby fridge, four shots were fired.

Constable Hoshal said he was hit by the first shot, left the scene and was taken to hospital.

In calling out to Bedry he said he identified himself as a city policeman and by name.

Inspector William Andrews said he was at the scene and had called out several times over a loud hailer for Bedry to come out. He also identified himself. There was no response.

TEAR GAS

Later, after tear gas shells were fired into the house, he saw the front door was open and Bedry was lying face down with his head outside.

Inspector Andrews said he saw no one else leave the house. He added that Inspector Clark gave him a .22 automatic rifle and three shell casings.

Dale Hayton, sporting goods store proprietor, told the court he had sold Bedry a similar rifle in April.

Det. Sgt. Norman Bath said he had charged Bedry with attempted murder and had cautioned him. Bedry denied shooting anyone.

Tennis Tournament

A centennial tennis tournament will be held on Young People's day, July 1, for players 16 years and under in Beacon Hill Park.

Entry forms, which can be obtained from the Greater Victoria centennial committee, must be returned by June 24. Trophies will be awarded.

'GRAND SCALE' COPPER THEFT BRINGS 3½-YEAR JAIL SENTENCE

Theft of nearly $15,000 worth of copper wire from Alberta Government Telephones sent a man to jail today for three and one-half years.

"This is theft on a grand scale," said Magistrate William Ostler, passing sentence on William Head inmate William Belcourt of Alberta Beach, Alberta.

The accused, who pleaded guilty to the charge of theft over $50, has a record going back to 1937.

Police said insulated copper telephone cable worth $14,968 was stolen from the yard in August last year, cut into 150-foot lengths and the insulation burned off, before being sold to scrap dealers in Edmonton.

Federation Strength Decreases by 10% As Locals Suspended

The B.C. Federation of Labor lost 10 per cent of its strength today.

The suspension of four locals of the International Woodworkers of America went into effect.

The locals—Victoria, Duncan, Vancouver and the lumber inspectors — were given until today to apologize for a joint public criticism by their presidents of a Canadian Labor Congress vice-president.

The statement, in April, strongly criticized Joe Morris—a former IWA regional president for his actions in the Gold River certification battle on Vancouver Island.

The suspensions, without precedent, were authorized by the federation's executive council late last month.

The four locals, with a combined membership of 13,000, have not made any public apology. The four presidents have said they will not do so and their position has been endorsed by their union members.

A spokesman for the B.C. Federation of Labour confirmed this morning there has been no change in the situation since the suspension ultimatum was announced two weeks ago.

Duncan IWA president Weldon Jubenville said the same, and repeated there will be no apology.

The federation executive said the four presidents contravened convention-approved policy.

A resolution passed at the 1965 federation convention resolved that affiliated unions "keep their troubles out of the public eye and present a united front to management."

City Force To Host Police Talks

An American university will hold its annual police seminar in Victoria June 21-23.

The Victoria city police department will act as host for the seminar of the Northwestern University traffic institute of Evanston, Ill.

Most of those attending are senior police and motor vehicle branch personnel who have graduated from the institute.

They are from B.C. and the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

Traffic institute director James Slavin will attend and there will be a number of speakers from all parts of North America. There will be panel discussions on all aspects of police administration, traffic and related techniques.

Insp. Brooke Douglass of the Victoria police will act as local chairman, assisted by Staff Supt. Alan Rossiter of the Vancouver police.

Mayor Hugh Stephen and Attorney-General Robert Bonner will address the meeting.

Lakes Closed For Spraying

Elk and Beaver lakes will be closed for swimming between noon and 8 p.m. Monday.

This is to allow Saanich crews to spray the waters to control algae, said senior parks supervisor Lloyd Sinclair.

"There has always been an algae problem but we're really going to work on keeping it under control," he said.

After the algae has been attacked, the parks department will turn its attention to the weeds.

Welsh Will Sing

Victoria Cymrodorion (Welsh) Society will hold its annual Gymanfa Ganu (sacred song festival) at the Salvation Army Citadel, Pandora Avenue, June 18 at 2 p.m.

Welsh hymns will be sung in Centennial Square the same day at 8:30 p.m.

Ask The Times

Q. Is the custom of awarding Freedom of the City military in origin? E. M-G.

A. Yes, says the army. It comes from medieval days when cities were walled as a protection against invaders. It was a mark of friendship if the army of a neighboring community was granted the privilege of marching freely through city bearing its swords, pikes and halberds. Upon receiving Freedom of a City, the military unit so honored is privileged to march through the city at any time with flags flying, drums beating and bearing arms without first having to ask permission from civic officials.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

ORCHESTRA HIRED NOT TO PLAY ON JUNE 31

Pledge: No Thick Heads After No Ball Ball

By TED GASKELL

Victoria wives, thanks to the Beaver Kiwanis Club, will get a chance to save their husbands at least $15 this month.

By buying a ticket to stay home.

The club, in an effort to raise funds for the Kiwanis Handicapped Children's Camp at Cowichan, is selling $10 tickets to a No Ball Ball for which people buy tickets but don't go.

"Usually when a couple goes to a ball the evening costs about $25 with the baby sitter, dinner, corsage and perhaps drinks," said the club's No Ball Ball chairman Len LeDoux. "This way we are saving husbands the $15 they would pay on incidentals."

"It will be a very posh affair. We quite expect that everybody in Victoria's 400 will not attend.

"We have already made arrangement not to use the Empress Ballroom and a caterer has been engaged not to supply refreshments."

Club members feel that many prominent people in Victoria have great demands on their time and are called upon to attend many functions.

This way we can give them a night off, the club feels. If anyone phones them and asks them to attend an official function they have a ready made excuse. They can say "sorry we're engaged tonight. We booked to stay away from the No Ball Ball."

At present the club is working through the musicians union to hire an orchestra to keep quiet that night.

Date for the NoBall is June 31.

Invitations to stay away have gone out and the club is expecting acceptances to come in almost immediately.

The service organization's camp is a $100,000 project and so far a good deal has been given in land, use of machinery and labor. Another $40,000 is still required to ready the camp for the handicapped children.

SHOPPING GUIDE

A Serving of History With Each Tasty Bite

By Penny Saver

I've always enjoyed sampling cheeses, and have many favorites, but my knowledge of the differences between various kinds has been strictly limited to my taste-buds. On a recent shopping expedition, however, I learned some astonishing facts about the history and production of various kinds of cheese.

If you had been invited to dinner in Roman empire days, it is quite possible that you would have been given cheesecake for dessert. Back in the hey-day of the Roman armies, men often lived for weeks on nothing but cream cheese and dried fruit. Today this cheese is still a popular spread for sandwiches and crackers. Cartons of this cheese are available in a wide variety of flavorings and are priced at 33 cents each.

Another unusual cheese I found is Norwegian gammelost—a cheese recipe dating back to Viking days. The Vikings carried this food on their ships, using it not only as a food, but as medicine, because of its penicillin content. It is a well-aged table cheese, excellent served with fruit or thinly sliced on crackers, and is priced at 99 cents per pound.

French Roquefort has been one of my favorites for years but I didn't realize that it had such a curious history. It is made in the Roquefort caves of France, and has been for several centuries. The story is told that the shepherds would take their meal of cream cheese and bread, and store it in the caves until they were hungry. One day a shepherd wandered too far from the caves and his meal was left there. Weeks later the cheese was discovered, with its mold developed, and was found to be an excellent food. This happy accident produced the method of aging still used today. Cheese is placed between layers of bread crumbs, and allowed to age in the perfectly balanced temperature and humidity of the caves. Imported French Roquefort sells at $1.10 per half-pound in this store.

A French gourmet's delight is the grape cheese, enclosed in its casing of grape seeds. Grapes are placed on the cream cheese, and are pressed so that the juice permeates it. This taste-tempting combination is allowed to ferment, and the grape seeds remain as a flavor-seal casing. This sweet cheese is excellent on crackers and sells for $1.10 per half pound.

If you have any questions on cheese, ask the proprietor of this store. He is a gold-mine of information.

If you'd like to know where I went on my "cheese kick," please give me a call at 382-3131.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Build Your Leg Muscles To Increase Leg Contour

Q. I hope you can help me. You have probably heard this question millions of times. I have the most horrible legs I have ever seen. I want to do something about them, and fast. They have no shape at all. They just come straight down. I have heard that gaining weight will help, but I cannot afford to gain weight. If there is any hope for me, please tell me because my legs are horrible.

Lowman

A. There is hope if you will exercise faithfully. You will have to build up the muscles in your legs to increase contour. Try this exercise. Stand with one hand on the wall or on the back of a chair. Lift your right heel off the floor as high as you can and at the same time swing your left leg forward with a stiff knee. Return heel to floor and leg to position. Do this 10 times.

Now lift your left heel from the floor and swing your right leg forward. Return to position. Repeat nine times. Later on work up to 25 times each day. Ballet lessons would be helpful, too.

Q. Are those of us who followed your BIP (Beauty Improvement Plan) supposed to write you about our results? I am so pleased with mine that I would like to tell you about it, but maybe lots of such letters would be a bother.

A. A bother! No! Never! I get a real thrill hearing about your success stories. My readers are not obligated to write, but I always feel that it is very gracious of them when they do. I have already received many letters from successful reducers but I would like to hear from more of you.

Why not let me join the fun? Tell me about your loss in pounds and measurements and also how this has affected your outlook, happiness and activities, if you wish.

Q. Recently I lost a lot of weight and my face is thinner. It also seems that the skin below my eyes is wrinkled. Can you tell me what creams I should use, if any, and what makeup to use on them?

A. There are excellent eye creams on the market. Pat one of these around your eyes. Pat gently. Heavy makeup when applied over lines makes them more noticeable. Blend the makeup toward them lightly. Do this only with your base. Do not powder over lines.

Q. Recently I had my third child. Two months afterward I noticed a growth of hair on my chin and on the upper lip. Can I remove this somehow and what caused it?

A. You can have it removed permanently by electrolysis or you can remove it temporarily with a depilatory. However, be sure to use a depilatory which was designed especially for use on the face and follow directions carefully. You can remove the hairs on the chin with tweezers. The growth of hair is no doubt due to a change in your hormone set-up.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Strange Noises Lead to Trouble

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently moved into a new apartment. There, we shortly began hearing all sorts of weird noises which neither of us could identify it. It sounded like a buzzing or a "beeping." It went off and on. Sometimes we didn't hear it for hours. Then it went on half the night. The noise seemed to be in the wall, but it didn't always come from the same direction. We tried to describe it to the manager, and he thought we were crazy.

My husband was out of town and I heard this noise again, so I called the manager and asked him to come up here and listen with me. He came, and we were just sitting on my bed listening when his wife suddenly barged in! She has a pass key.

Now, I wouldn't have her husband on a silver platter, much less a bed, but she confronted me as though I should apologize. Did she have a right to barge into my apartment like that? I assure you we were only listening.—MRS. C.

DEAR MRS. C.: She did not. But now that you know what she thinks of her husband, the next time you invite him up to your apartment to "listen," invite her up to "look."

DEAR ABBY: A week ago my 10-year-old son found a credit card. I telephoned the person whose name was on the card, and a lady answered the phone. She said it belonged to her son who goes to a nearby college.

Instead of offering me a small reward, she asked me to MAIL the card back to her. These people could easily stop by here and pick up the card as they live only a short distance from us. In fact, I asked her to do so but she insisted I mail it back to her. I refused.

Abby, isn't a reward due my son? If so, how much? Am I wrong to refuse to mail the credit card back to her? She has my name and address.—HONEST

DEAR HONEST: It would seem that a reward was in order, but since none was offered in advance, you can't "demand" one. Mail the card back to the owner. Honesty is its own reward.

DEAR ABBY: Many of our friends enjoy dinner out and a striptease show. My husband thinks there is something wrong with me because I refuse to go to places like that.

I just can't bring myself to sit with my husband and other people while some nudie does a striptease dance. I don't care if other people enjoy it—that's their business, but if my husband wants to see that sort of thing he can go without me.

I am not ugly and I have a pretty good figure for a woman of my age, so I don't think I am jealous.

Please say you understand my feelings so I won't feel so alone.—SHY

DEAR SHY: I understand — and you are NOT alone.

CONFIDENTIAL TO C. C. H. IN ASHVILLE: There are exceptions, of course, but the general condition of a woman's health is a fairly good index to her husband's character.

NABA Holds Rally in City To Mark 75th Anniversary

Members of British Columbia reviews, North American Benefit Association, marked the group's 75th anniversary last week with a rally and banquet in Holyrood House.

Provincial field director Mrs. Winnifred E. Disney, Vancouver, presided at the rally and Mrs. E. Crowther was general convener. In her address, Mrs. Disney told the delegates that more than $1,000 had been donated by provincial reviews to charitable organizations, including $270 for the Heart Fund. She, Mrs. Crowther and Mrs. H. Graas, who handled tickets and programs, were presented with gifts. Pins were given to delegates with 25 and 50 years of NABA membership. Entertainment was by Reg Stofer and soloist was Mrs. P. Sherritt.

Mrs. K. Schmelz made the orchid corsages which were presented to guests, which included a number from the mainland.

The following day, past presidents gathered in Holyrood House for a meeting and luncheon, followed by the election of officers. Mrs. Emma Hutchinson, Vancouver, presided at the affair which was convened by Mrs. Schmelz and Mrs. A. Taylor.

Delegates, then were treated to a sightseeing tour of the city, sponsored by the Victoria Pioneer Club, NABA, which was followed by tea in the Slater Street home of Mrs. Graas and Mrs. Kathleen Jacques. The refreshment table was centred with a large centennial cake, flanked by candles. Mrs. Disney, Mrs. Crowther, Mrs. Schmelz and Mrs. E. Hutchinson were presented with gifts.

Serving refreshments were Mrs. Mary Williams, Mrs. K. Berry, Mrs. R. Thompson, Miss E. Bailey, Mrs. J. Bowden and Mrs. K. Jacques. Mrs. Schmelz gave a vote of thanks to committee members.

A New You

by Emily Wilkens

Charm is a seemingly magical quality that's hard to define but easy to pinpoint. We all know when someone is charming, but it's really difficult to know just why.

Actually, charm is a potpourri of many lovely qualities—warmth, sympathy, sincere interest in others, and a kind of joie de vivre that shines through. For the lucky beings who possess "charm", life is somehow easier and success seems more readily obtainable.

This elusive, effective "blessing" is happily attainable for everyone, however. Believe it or not, with a little bit of work you, too, can be a Princess Charming.

The preliminary attitude is: Don't be a worry bug! Not only do you use up precious energy worrying over what happened yesterday or what might occur tomorrow, but this kind of preoccupation shows in your face, even your very posture. My favorite pillow bears the motto "Don't worry—it never happens."

Do be self-conscious in the true sense. You have to believe that the most wonderful person you could possibly be is you. In our commercially-oriented world, people are always trying to typecast individuals as "typical". Avoid this kind of composite. Live up to your own ideal, not somebody else's.

Don't "go along with the crowd," even though it's easier than bucking traffic. If you look around, you'll see that the joiners are not usually the charmers. It's the leaders—those who dare to be different—who set the pace and win the game. Anyone who has ever achieved success, be it movie star or president, has done so by being an individual.

Do discover yourself. It's exciting and fulfilling to discover what you like and dislike, how you feel about everything.

If you like to read and hate the movies, read. If you like short hair and everyone else has waist-length tresses, crop yours.

If you adopt these five tricks you'll be well on your way to a "charmed life."

1. Hide your troubles and woes. People don't respond to gloom and doom. But a smile and happy talk are welcomed by everyone.

2. Think before you speak. Don't ever get caught "putting your foot in your mouth".

3. Give in graciously. If someone says or does something you think is wrong, don't corner him—make it possible for him to bow out gracefully.

4. Act like a lady—even to people you dislike. Don't snub them or be rude, catty or nasty. Speak impersonally, if you must, but be polite.

5. Play the diplomatic game. Begin sentences with "don't you think," "isn't it true," or "don't you feel?"

THE NEW YOU who combines a sincere interest in other people with her own belief and confidence can't miss becoming a "charmer".

Just For You: Make a game of saying something sincerely nice first—you'll find your reputation as a sweet, charming person precedes you.

Two Projects

Funds realized from the recent annual tea and bake sale of Dunsmuir District Girl Guides Association in St. Barnabas Church Hall have been earmarked for two special funds. Part of the funds will be used to assist the guides' Camp Heritage in Ontario and the remainder will be used to aid a cadet to attend the international guide conference in Sweden. A total of $64.17 was realized from the bake sale and $60.03 from the tea.

CONDON-ROURKE WEDDING

Following their recent wedding in St. Patrick's Church, Mr. and Mrs. John William Condon left on a honeymoon trip to California.

Rev. A. E. Leonard officiated at the service which united Carol Anne Rourke, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard M. Rourke of Vancouver, formerly of Victoria, and the son of Mrs. Dorothy L. Condon, 1354 Harrison Street.

The bride chose a floor-length gown of lace over taffeta, styled in a cage design, accented by a gathered train which swept back from the shoulders. A cascade bouquet of white carnations and yellow roses completed her ensemble.

Baskets of tulips and gladioli in white, yellow and coral shades decorated the church for the ceremony. The organist was Mrs. Leslie Gill, and soloist, Roy Silver, sang "A Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register. Mr. Rourke gave his daughter in marriage.

Three of the six bridal attendants were in gowns of yellow peau d'elegance, and three were in tangerine tones. Styled on empire lines, the gowns were accented by matching ring headpieces. Miss Patricia Rourke was her sister's maid of honor, and bridesmaids were the Misses Janet Condon, the groom's sister; Miss Sharon Rourke, the bride's sister; Marlene Casilio, Penny Thornett, and Eileen Novakowski. They carried bouquets of white carnations centred with flowers sprayed to match their gowns.

Roy Silver was best man. Ushering guests to pews marked with ribbon bouquets were Gordon Brands, Alan Dand, Jim Thompson, and Eugene Kaulius.

At the reception following in the Red Lion Motor Inn, gold draperies formed the backdrop for the head table, which was decorated in a similar shade. H. R. Horne proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling the new Mrs. Condon chose a blue and pecan checked wool suit, which she accented with pecan accessories and a gardenia corsage.

On their return the newlyweds will make their home at Long Lake, B.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald McDowell, 2518 Fernwood Road, announce the forthcoming marriage of their only daughter, Virginia Anne, to Mr. Graham John Bennett, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Bennett, 3313 Whittier Avenue. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 24, at 8:30 p.m., in Victoria Truth Centre. Dr. Emma Smiley will officiate. (Jus-Rite Portrait Studio.)

AS PART OF HONEYMOON TRIP

Couple Visit Montreal and Expo

Following their recent wedding in Garden City United Church, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. David Harry Talbot left on a honeymoon trip east to Montreal and Expo 67.

The bride, the former Patricia Jean Williams, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Williams, 3421 Cook Street, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Talbot, 995 Ridgeway Street. Rev. H. R. Whitmore officiated at the service and Mr. Williams gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's street-length dress was of white peau de soie, encaged in chiffon. The embroidered bodice was fashioned with three-quarter-length sleeves and a softly scooped neckline. Adding back interest was a panel of the same fabric, extending from a cluster of roses. Her veil misted from a pearl-studded bandeau and she carried yellow roses and white chrysanthemums in her bouquet.

Her only attendant, Miss Diana McCoy, was in a street-length dress of tangerine crepe, styled on A-lines. Her jewelry was the bride's gift of pearl earrings. The flowers in her hair matched her bouquet of daisies and chrysanthemums.

Terry James was best man and ushering the guests was John Edgington.

A two-tier wedding cake, set on a silver base, centred the head table at the reception following in the home of the groom's parents. A. Coomber proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Talbot donned a dress of pale blue silk, which she topped with a coat en tone and complemented with white accessories.

The couple will make their home at 2150 Cadboro Bay Road.

Out-of-town guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. T. Talbot and family of Powell River; Mr. and Mrs. H. Talbot, Mr. and Mrs. R. Talbot, Mr. and Mrs. B. Reay and Mr. and Mrs. H. Thorpe, all of Vancouver.

Gown Enhanced With Lace For Alger-Hamer Service

A floor-length sheath gown of peau d'elegance was worn by Judith Marian Hamer when she exchanged wedding rings and vows with Robert Kenneth Alger.

The gown featured Kabuki sleeves of Chantilly lace and similar lace bordered the hemline. A full cathedral train swept back from the shoulders. Her four-tier veil of illusion net misted to the waist from a headpiece fashioned of white fabric flowers. She carried a bouquet of white carnations and yellow roses.

St. John's Anglican Church was decorated with arrangements of white stocks for the candlelight ceremony at which Canon Grahame Baker officiated. Organist Donald Woodworth played "Ave Maria" during the signing of the register.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hamer of Salt Spring Island, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Alger, 1112 Bewdley Avenue. Mr. Hamer gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's attendants wore floor-length gowns of blue crystal sheer over lime-green taffeta, styled on empire lines, with an A-line flare to the skirt and belled sleeves. Silver lockets, gifts of the bride, were jewelry accents for the gowns. Maid of honor Miss Nancy Janes and bridesmaid Miss Wendy Allnutt carried bouquets of white carnations, and junior bridesmaid Miss Shirley Alger, sister of the bride, had a basket of white carnations and yellow roses.

Best man was Tom Hamer and Doug Alger was usher. Both are brothers of the principals.

At the reception in Holyrood House, the couple cut the three-tier wedding cake, topped by a single yellow rose, with a sword belonging to the bride's grandfather. Alex Thorpe proposed the toast.

For travelling on honeymoon to Las Vegas and Reno, the bride chose a two-piece ensemble of turquoise blue linen. A toning hat and bone accessories completed the outfit. She wore a gardenia corsage.

Dainty Handiwork From Pakistan Featured at St. Philip's Party

Many Victoria women took a little bit of Pakistan home with them Wednesday. They were the guests who attended the garden party of St. Philip's Anglican Church Women, held in the attractive garden of Dr. and Mrs. Carron Jameson's home on Lansdowne Road.

It seemed that none of them could pass by one of the stalls that was featured—a display of exquisite handiwork made in Pakistan. Table cloths, mats, napkins, all delicately hand-embroidered, stitched and hemmed, had every woman who appreciates beautiful articles crowding round the table to buy. Especially for the youngsters were the hand-knit cardigan and pullover sweaters. These featured kittens, dogs, deer — all sorts of animals knit into the design and had moms and grandmas snapping them up for gifts.

The handicrafts represent hundreds of hours of work by women in Pakistan. Illiterate women in the eastern country are trained to produce the dainty designs in three weeks, and the work of their fingers often represents their families' only means of survival.

Training is conducted through the Technological Services Association, established and managed by missionaries of the Anglican Church in Canada. More than 600 women are now employed through the service.

Mrs. A. Winser was in charge of this stall.

Another stall which was doing a lively business during the afternoon was the home cooking booth, convened by Mrs. B. Currie and Mrs. S. Hayward. Mrs. E. Rowbotham and Mrs. W. Rowley were in charge of the fancywork stall, and Mrs. R. Derry, plants.

Mrs. R. O. Wilkes supervised a hat booth. The millinery featured was in one design, but it could be adjusted to fit any occasion, casual or party.

Mrs. W. Welland was general convener and Mrs. R. G. Graves, ACW president, greeted the guests. Handling receipts, which amounted to $320, was Mrs. George Brown.

Committee Drafting Wider Divorce Bill

IAN FRANKLIN
. . . tops

OTTAWA (CP) — A draft bill widening the grounds for divorce will form part of a 250-page report on divorce laws to be issued shortly by a special parliamentary committee.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (L — Ontario), committee co-chairman, expressed the hope Thursday the committee's draft bill will be accepted by the government and introduced for debate in the fall.

The committee held its first meeting of the 1967 session Thursday and re-elected Senator Roebuck and A. J. P. Cameron (L—Toronto High Park) as co-chairmen.

The joint group held extensive public hearings last year and a draft report will be discussed at closed meetings next week before being tabled in the Commons and Senate.

The committee is expected to recommend that grounds for divorce be extended to cruelty, desertion and other marital faults.

LAW UNCHANGED

Canada's divorce laws are largely unchanged from 1867 and limit grounds to adultery, except in rare cases of cruelty or perversion.

Senator Roebuck said the report contains considerable background information on divorce laws in Britain, the United States and many other countries. There was also a detailed draft divorce bill for Canada and sections on "human philosophy."

The document was written with help from justice department lawyers. The confidential draft must still be approved or modified by the full 24-member committee.

OTHER LOCAL WINNERS

Other Victoria winners on Thursday were the Greater Victoria Schools Junior Orchestra, conducted by Thomas Tucker, and clarinetist Donald Mayer who took first place in the junior wind instrument class.

Monterey School Choir conducted by Mrs. Lorna Griffiths placed second in the junior choir category.

Other Victorians competing today are pianists Cheryl Borris and Linn Hendry, singer Penelope Beavan, the Colquitz Junior Secondary Band and Mount View Secondary Band.

National finals are confined to provincial winners in senior and junior choir, senior vocal, piano, strings and wind classes.

Program In Parks This Summer

More than 3,000 Saanich youngsters are expected to enroll in a crafts and sports program in the municipality this summer.

Lloyd Sinclair, Saanich's senior parks supervisor, has hired 32 high school girls and married women to run the program. It starts July 4 in the municipality's 19 parks.

The sessions will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Supervisors and assistants are now being briefed on their duties and will attend a seminar June 17 on the objectives of the summer plans.

Saanich will supply the materials for the arts and crafts sessions. Children enrolling should be between the ages of five and 14 and must have the consent of their parents.

Swimming instruction is part of the program and at the end of the summer a swimming meet with participants from Saanich, Oak Bay, Victoria and Esquimalt will be held.

An "open house" will also be held in Hampton Park at the end of the season where parents will see the results of the crafts program.

A child wishing to enroll need only to go to his neighborhood park 10 a.m. July 4.

CONGRESSMAN SHOOTS COLLEAGUE IN CHEST

BRASILIA (AP)—A Brazilian congressman shot a colleague Thursday during a hand-to-hand struggle in a hall of the Congress building.

Security officers said Deputy Nelson Carneiro shot Deputy Eustacio Souto Maior twice in the chest outside an office of the Brazilian Democratic Movement, the country's only opposition party. Doctors at a hospital to which Souto Maior was taken said his life was not in danger.

Acquaintances said Souto Maior slapped Carneiro in the face during a dispute a week ago.

Impaired Driver Jailed

Richard Good, 40, of 330 Niagara, was jailed for six months Thursday when he appeared in central court for sentence on an impaired driving conviction.

He was stopped by police April 18 when his car was spotted weaving on Government and Wharf Streets.

The accused has previous convictions for driving offences, including impaired driving, court was told.

Hughie McIsaac, 2685 Sooke Rd., was fined $400 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

His truck was seen to cross the centre line on three occasions Wednesday night while police followed it for half a mile on Sooke Road. McIsaac's driving licence was also suspended.

Fined $45 was Richard Jones of 39 Lewis St. when he pleaded guilty to careless driving.

He was arrested and spent the night in jail after police spotted him speeding on Cook near Dallas.

Jones' defence counsel, Robert Price, said his client had not been allowed to phone for a lawyer until he had been in the jail three hours and that an arrest in a careless driving case was unusual.

He did not argue when Prosecutor John Macintyre said he had investigated the circumstances of the arrest and found the police had acted "in a perfectly proper manner" and there was a reason for the arrest which he did not want to detail.

Mr. Glod's father in Manitoba is anxious to get in touch with him.

Anyone with information on where Mr. Glod might be is asked to contact Mrs. Miller at the Victoria and District branch, 1046 Fort Street.

Landreville Pension Hint Sparks New Ottawa Fray

By RONALD LEBEL

LANDREVILLE
. . . health key test

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Leo Landreville has resigned from the Ontario Supreme Court amid government indications that he may get a life pension of $18,666 a year.

The 57-year-old judge and one-time Sudbury mayor resigned just as the Senate was scheduled to open debate Thursday on an unprecedented motion to unseat him for alleged improper conduct in stock dealings.

Opposition spokesmen in both houses served notice they will fight any government move to award the judge a special pension.

Justice Minister Trudeau announced in the Commons that the government had accepted the resignation, effective June 30. Asked about a possible pension, he replied amid opposition hoots:

"I think it is very much the type of matter to which the government might well give some consideration."

At a press conference later, the minister said he would have to weigh arguments for and against a pension.

Justice Landreville said in his letter: "After five difficult years and appearing in seven hearings, my health and wealth are impaired. I cannot continue."

He said the controversy arising from his $117,000 stock market windfall 10 years ago destroyed his usefulness as a judge, but reaffirmed his innocence of any wrongdoing.

His integrity or conduct in hearing court cases had never been questioned.

"In my personal life as mayor, solicitor or citizen, I repeat emphatically and reaffirm my innocence of any wrongdoing in law or ethics. But I cannot remove unfounded suspicions."

He thanked the residents of Sudbury for their "continued confidence and persistence in defending me."

The judge dated his resignation letter in Ottawa Wednesday and was unavailable for comment Thursday. His wife said in Toronto he was still in Ottawa, but a local hotel said he checked out Thursday morning.

The resignation was announced in the Commons about 30 minutes before the Senate was expected to open a long and bitter impeachment debate.

Senator Daniel Lang (L—Toronto), co-chairman of a special Commons - Senate committee that recommended the judge's removal in March, quickly withdrew his impeachment motion filed Tuesday night.

The resolution made two accusations against the judge:

—That he had failed to remove "grave suspicion of impropriety" arising from his acceptance in early 1957 of 7,500 shares in Northern Ontario Natural Gas Co. free of charge. He sold the stock later for $117,000.

—That the manner in which he testified at a 1962 hearing by the Ontario Securities Commission and the resulting perjury trial of Ralph Farris, then NONG president, constituted "a gross contempt of the tribunals concerned and a serious violation of his personal duty as a judge."

Both charges were originally made last August by Ivan Rand, retired justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, in a slashing report on a lengthy judicial inquiry. Mr. Rand accused the judge of helping NONG to get the Sudbury gas franchise while he was mayor in 1956 and of giving evasive testimony in subsequent investigations.

ELEVATED TO BAR

Justice Landreville negotiated the gas franchise with Mr. Farris during several months in 1956, then resigned as mayor to accept his appointment to the bench in October that year.

NONG's tangled stock transactions were the subject of two investigations by the Ontario Securities Commision; one by the British Columbia Securities Commission; a preliminary hearing and trial resulting in Mr. Farris' conviction and jail sentence for perjury; a closed inquiry by the Upper Canada Law Society in 1965; the Rand inquiry last year; the parliamentary hearings this year and a 1964 preliminary hearing on a charge of municipal corruption against Justice Landreville. The charge was dismissed because the judge received nothing from NONG while he was still mayor.

COULD QUALIFY

Mr. Trudeau told reporters Thursday that the judge could qualify for a pension of $18,666. two-thirds of his $28,000 salary, only for health reasons.

Justice Landreville offered to resign earlier this year if he were awarded a pension. The reference to "impaired health and wealth" in his resignation letter appeared to be a request for a pension.

EDITOR CHARGES:

Press Hindered In Expo Probe

MONTREAL (CP) — Maurice Dagenais, managing editor of La Presse, spoke out Thursday against individuals and public bodies who "manoeuvre in a subtle way . . . to restrict access to sources of information."

As examples he cited the Montreal executive committee, which meets behind closed doors, and the Quebec government.

In his address to a Montreal service club, Mr. Dagenais also referred to an investigation by La Presse which resulted in the publication March 23 of a story saying police were investigating fraudulent activities affecting the accommodation of Expo visitors, an operation which could "involve a sum exceeding $1,000,000."

He said reporters on the staff of the French-language daily learned that "all was not on the level in the field of reservation of accommodations for Expo." They had launched a painstaking investigation and had come up with "some extremely disquiting facts."

DID ITS DUTY

"La Presse wanted to do its duty and present to the public all the facts it was possible to discover.

"The commissioner-general of Expo, Mr. Pierre Dupuy, denounced this story on the basis of the fact that a certain police investigation had discovered no fraud in Logexpo.

"And yet, was it not discovered later that some motels were non-existent, that tourists were unable to find the motel they had planned to stay at during their visit to Montreal? Who can say today that all was honest in the gigantic operation of room reservations for Expo?"

Mr. Dagenais said that if La Presse reporters had had access to all sources of information, the newspaper could have presented a more exact account, "the public would have been better informed, the errors could have been corrected, and the reputation of Montreal and of Canada would have been intact."

Mr. Dagenais said Mr. Dupuy had complained about the skepticism of local newspapers toward Expo while his right-hand man, Deputy Commissioner-General Robert Shaw, had said publicly that newspapers were among the main reasons for Expo's success.

“OUR AIM IS TO EXTERMINATE ISRAEL”

—King Feisal of Saudi Arabia, May 25, 1967

Again
the spirit of Adolph Hitler appears to have arisen with the intent to stamp out an entire race of people. He almost succeeded. Today, other forces of destruction are at work with the same aim.

Men, women and children have died in the holy city of Jerusalem.
A nation, a race, a spirit that has survived three thousand years has its existence threatened.
Unless you help.
Your money is needed now, today, to speed life to a beleagured people.

At such a time, every man who believes in humanity, in justice, in the free right of people to their own life, must act.
Israel’s struggle still goes on . . .

ETHNIC SENSITIVITIES

Pressure Groups Inhibit Writers

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A top television writer says that he and his fellow craftsmen "are being painted into a corner by self-censorship due to the cumulative effect of pressure groups."

The latest hazard, says Norman Jolley, is the American-Italian Anti-Defamation League, for which Frank Sinatra recently became national chairman.

The networks' acquiescence to pressure groups has long rankled writers. They have said that they can't deal with reality because of orders not to offend any group. Businessmen object when an executive is portrayed as a villain; the same is true of doctors, Orientals, Indians, teachers.

The writers' complaint was voiced by Jolley, author of 1,200 tele-plays and currently writer for The FBI, Saturday night at the alumni banquet of Iowa Wesleyan College, Mount Pleasant, Iowa.

"The function of the writer is to hold mirror up to nature. If he can't present the truth as he sees it, then he will be showing a distorted image."

BASED ON MANY FACTS

Jolly's speech was prompted by his experience with a two-part script he researched and wrote on the Cosa Nostra for The FBI.

Entitled The Executioners, it was presented March 12 and 19 on ABC.

Besides star Efrem Zimbalist, the show featured Walter Pidgeon, Telly Savalas, Celeste Holm and Susan Strasberg. Jolley pointed out that no one actor of Italian derivation was cast, and only one Italian name, Clemente, was used in the script.

Jolley said that after the second segment was shown, the sponsors — Ford — received a telegram from New York Civil Court Judge Ross J. Dilorenzo, president of the American Italian Anti-Defamation League.

He questioned the veracity of the script and added:

"If pure fabrication it would constitute outright defamation of many thousands of American-Italian college students — the villain was a collegiate who killed for the Mafia — and violation of FCC regulations.

"In the name of 22,000,000 American-Italians in the United States, we resent vehemently this type of program that slanders the decent, law-abiding citizens of an important ethnic group. We have been flooded with angry protests from many members."

In answer to Judge Dilorenzo's protest, Jolley declared that The Executioners script was based on 15 different FBI cases, "with the names and incidents changed to protect the guilty."

The writer charged that a U.S. representative and senator joined the pressure campaign and as a result The Executioners was removed from the summer re-run schedule on ABC.

78 Pioneers Honored With Medals

Centennial medallions were presented Thursday to 78 men and women pioneers living in North Saanich and Sidney.

All have lived in Canada for 75 years or more.

The tea at Deep Cove Chalet was arranged by the Sidney and North Saanich Centennial Committee under the chairmanship of Ald. Hans Rasmussen.

Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes and Mrs. Pearkes awarded the medals.

For Mrs. Pearkes, who was born near Sidney, many of the faces were familiar.

LINKS WITH PAST

The drive to Deep Cove was a favorite in her childhood, but the mode of transportation was different. She rode then in a trap drawn by a Shetland pony.

Among those present was Mrs. G. S. Downing, 78, nee Dorothy McTavish, a great-granddaughter of Sir James Douglas, the first governor of what was then the Crown Colony of British Columbia.

Her father, G. A. McTavish, was a member of the legislature and operated a large farm at Ardmore.

Mrs. Maud Norris, born on a Wains Cross Road farm in 1886, was another. Her father, R. P. Horth, drove a stage from North Saanich to Victoria.

"North Saanich was a much larger centre of farming than it is today," she said. "There were more orchards, grazing land and farms specializing in growing hops."

INDIANS REPRESENTED

The guest descended from the oldest pioneering family was Mrs. Cecilia Jim, a member of the Tsaycum Reserve, Patricia Bay, whose band occupied North Saanich hundreds of years ago.

MEDALLIONS were presented by Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes (right) to descendants of North Saanich pioneer families at a Deep Cove Centennial tea Thursday. Left to right, William Charles Horth, Mrs. Maud Norris and Mrs. C. S. Downing, a great-granddaughter of Sir James Douglas.

Mrs. Jim said 50 years ago there were not only more farm products grown in North Saanich, but more fish harvested from Saanich Inlet.

"The Inlet was a bread basket as far as salmon was concerned," she said.

Eighty-five-year-old George Cochrane, 9713 2nd Street, Sidney, recalled that he settled in Sidney 45 years ago.

The town then had a large factory which canned clams and fruits. It was just below the Sidney Hotel.

"The Indians used to bring in clams by the sackful," he said.

Phillip and Stanley Brethour, whose family owned most of Sidney, were also at the reception.

Among civic officials were Reeve J. B. Cumming and Mrs. Cumming of North Saanich, and Mayor A. W. Freeman, of Sidney.

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Roman Catholic priest and two companions were robbed at gunpoint Thursday night of $920, proceeds from a church bingo game.

Two men carrying a gun and a large club accosted the priest and his companions as they crossed a courtyard between St. Jude's Church auditorium and the priest's office in the church itself.

Ripples of War Spill Over On Mideast Pavilions at Expo

By CY FOX

MONTREAL (CP)—The Middle East may be in ferment and the air full of bitter words, but Commissioner - General Pierre Dupuy of Expo 67 apparently is determined to keep the community of nations at his goodwill-generating fair intact.

Officials of the Kuwait pavilion at Expo have been packing their exhibits for possible removal following a May 29 order by the government of their oil-rich, Middle East country that the pavilion close its doors.

The doors were shut immediately after the order went out in protest against what Kuwait called the anti-Arab bias of Canadian foreign policy.

Expo officials said Thurday night Mr. Dupuy has asked Kuwait's commissioner-general at the fair to reconsider removal of the exhibits until definite orders for permanent closedown come through from the sheikdom's government.

Meantime, diplomatic efforts are believed continuing, aimed at keeping the Kuwaitis in Expo.

"The position is fluid," said an official at Expo's operations control department when asked whether Kuwait was staying or going.

Meantime, an apparently minor demonstration was reported to have taken place at the Expo pavilion of the United Arab Republic Thursday.

Four young men were ushered off the Expo grounds after what was officially described as speech-making by them in the U.A.R. centre. The words seemed to have been pro-Israeli in character, the second such demonstration at Expo since war in the Middle East exploded Monday.

Otherwise, the fairgrounds were quiet Thursday, with visitors ranging from Canada's Governor - General and Britain's Princess Alexandra to the mayor of Boston.

Philipp de Gaspe Beaubien, Expo's director of operations, said the exhibition's net revenues until the end of May were $47,960,000.

This, he remarked, was beyond the expectations of authorities at Expo, the total cost of which was $379,446,680. The expected deficit is $137,747,040.

About the revenue figure, Mr. Beaubien said: "I'm not satisfied . . . but we're pleased."

Governor - General and Mrs. Roland Michener made a casual tour of the site, sampling the food of Ontario and the Atlantic provinces, and the exhibitions of Britain, France and Western Canada. Their tour of the fairgrounds went forward in fair weather until the evening brought rain.

Equally without ceremony was a trip through Expo of Princess Alexandra, cousin of the Queen, and the princess' husband, Angus Ogilvy.

As they went, Expo was celebrating its Scandinavian Day, a spectacularly intricate drill display by Norwegian military musicians stealing the show.

The Norwegians were honored, as were Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Sweden.

Mayor John Collins of Boston came to the fair with a group of Boston-area municipal and business leaders.

The Thursday night rain at Expo apparently curbed attendance. Nevertheless, by 12 midnight it was 189,648 for the day, compared with a predicted 121,380. Total attendance since the fair's official inauguration April 27 was 10,621,505.

No Truce At Expo Pavilions

By CY FOX

MONTREAL (CP)—Elements unsympathetic to the Arab cause in the Middle East have been spreading "unfounded" reports that the United Arab Republic's pavilion at Expo 67 may close but this propaganda has boomeranged, a pavilion official said Thursday night.

Meantime, spokesmen for the Israeli pavilion say the Middle East war has increased attendance and elicited statements of visitor support at that fairgrounds centre.

Fathi Sawvi, who identified himself as deputy director of the U.A.R. pavilion, said in an interview that the unfounded reports of a closing caused many people to head in a rush for that centre. They feared it would close before they could see it or could revisit it.

He seemed convinced, however, that his government had no plans for closing the pavilion.

IN HOLLYWOOD, THAT IS

Some Things So Far Out They're In

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dominoes, pool playing, micro-skirts and poetry are in with the movie crowd. Wigs, table tennis and organized party fun are out.

Political involvement and air-conditioned cars are in. High heels and convertibles are out.

What does "in" mean? Says one observer: "The 'in' group is tuned in to the newest happenings and sets the pace."

Another says: "'In' means something that, once everybody starts doing it, is no longer in."

Natalie Wood, an acknowledged authority, defines "in" simply as "popular at the moment."

Thus, in Hollywood, refurbished Spanish - style homes of the 1920s again are in, occupied by James Coburn, Rock Hudson, Steve McQueen and others.

"In" window drapes are made from a flowered French bed-line material. Wicker furniture and garden swings are back.

Also in are sunglasses with pink, blue, orange or yellow lenses; British actors; young directors and reading Women's Wear Daily and The Christian Science Monitor.

In pets are Hungarian sheepdogs, Yorkshire terriers and mongrels. Poodles are out.

In drinks are the Black Russian (vodka and coffee-flavored liqueur), the Danish Mary (aquavit and tomato juice), the Bullshot vodka and bouillon and a mixture of champagne and peach juice. For martinis, vodka is more in than gin.

The in car is the $7,250 Excalibur SS, a copy of the 1927 Mercedes-Benz SSK, followed by the Ferrari, the Jaguar XK-E, the Bentley and the Rolls-Royce. A telephone and stereo tape player are in accessories for any car.

"In" sprts are tennis, especially on your own court; soccer, both spectator and participant, and motorcycle - riding. Polo is starting up again. A pool table in your home is very in.

Men's turtleneck sweaters are so in that guests wore them with tuxedos at a recent party. Also for men: double - breasted sport coats, wide neckties and polka dots in ties, handkerchiefs and belts.

In at parties are no-coin juke boxes; reading poetry aloud, especially your own, and everything-goes clothes: dungarees, sneakers, gowns, slacks, mini- or even shorter micro-skirts.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The case of the people vs. South, accused of wilfully and maliciously stealing three tricks, had been skillfully prosecuted by Hamilton Burg, the District Attorney.

Bridge Detective Lieutenant Gragg had prescribed the actual play of the hand in which South, with 18 points in his hand and one point in dummy, had made three overtricks at a one no-trump contract.

Opening lead—♣ 2

Merry Payson, attorney for the defence, rose to cross-examine. He began: "Lieutenant, I recall from your testimony that West opened the deuce of clubs. East's queen forced South's ace. South returned a club. West took his king and jack and threw South in with the ten. Meanwhile East had discarded two spades. South led his ace and king of spades. The queen dropped and a third spade was led to dummy's ten. South cashed the jack and discarded the eight of diamonds. Meanwhile, East had thrown the five and jack of hearts and West the deuces of hearts and diamonds. Then South led a heart to his ace and threw West in again with the king of hearts. West underled his ace of diamonds. South made the last three tricks with the king of diamonds and dummy's ten and eight of hearts. Will you kindly inform the court which card West played on the third spade lead?"

"He played the deuce of hearts," replied the lieutenant.

Payson turned to the judge and said, "Your honor, I respectfully move for a directed verdict of acquittal. In the famous case of People vs. Culbertson it was established that the discard of a deuce under those circumstances clearly tells partner to protect that suit. If East had protected hearts then West could have dropped his king of hearts under South's ace. East would have gained the lead and played a diamond. When East discarded hearts in spite of his partner's deuce discard he actually gave South two tricks. West gave him the third when he underled his ace of diamonds."

"Motion granted," said the judge. "Defendant is acquitted."

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

The war in the Middle East has claimed the lives of at least three reporters.

War, of course, doesn't differentiate between the soldier and the non-combatant but the soldier is more susceptible to death because it is a part of his environment.

Stephen

Of the trio killed in the Middle East affair, Ted Yates, the NBC-TV producer-reporter, was the best known to the television viewing masses.

His contributions to the media in the field of brilliant documentaries were many.

His most recent work appeared during the past season. It was the three-part project, "The Battle for Asia."

The three telecasts, "Thailand: The New Front," "Laos: The Forgotten War" and "Indonesia: The Troubled Victory," were objective, non-partisan reports of merit about the communist expansion in Southeast Asia and America's involvement there.

Some of his other award-winning documentaries included "The Congo: Victim of Independence," and "The Undeclared War," which focused on the social and political unrest in the Central American countries of Guatemala and Columbia.

Yates also made "Santo Domingo: War Among Friends," an account of developments in the Dominican Republic in chronological order.

Another of his remembered documentaries was "Vietnam: It's a Mad War." This was among the first tele-documentaries to disclose the reasons for the fighting in Vietnam.

He also co-produced "Our Man on the Mississippi," a tour of the famous river with David Brinkley and "The Journals of Lewis and Clark," which re-created the historic expedition that opened up the Pacific Northwest.

His death will rob television of a producer of documentaries of unparalleled quality.

It is an unfortunate price to be paid by any newsman who goes out to cover a story, in this case, to be caught in the whorl of war.

Israel Alone When Chips Were Down

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Premier Levi Eshkol said Thursday night that President Johnson "promised great things" but in the end Israel stood virtually alone in her confrontation with the Arab world.

Eshkol talked of Israel's plight in the crisis that led to war in a speech to his party's officials.

Discussing the 21 days before the war broke out, he said, "We were first asked to wait two days," apparently before taking any action against the Arabs mobilized around Israel.

"Then we sent (Foreign Minister) Abba Eban to the United States—and were asked to wait a further fortnight. President Johnson promised great things.

"They told us that 40 to 50 maritime powers would sign a guarantee for free passage through the Tiran Straits" which the United Arab Republic had blockaded against Israeli shipping.

"We examined the situation and found that it really came down to a dozen and finally to only two countries and then, perhaps, to only one—Israel," he said.

"I once told President Johnson it is likely that (when) we are attacked you will be very busy with other matters and that the nature of the (American) guarantee is unclear," the premier said.

His remarks tended to confirm reports that Washington, as well as Britain and other nations, strongly urged the Israelis to refrain from action in order to give diplomats time to find a solution to the crisis.

New Shop Centre Proposed For Lake Hill

A new shopping centre is being proposed in the Lake Hill district of Saanich.

Location is at Borden and McKenzie, to the north of the Reynolds Road Secondary School.

The application for rezoning was submitted by W. L. Wansborough who works for a local accounting company.

He would give few details except to say it will be for an independent food store.

"We just want the rezoning," he said.

It would also include a data processing computer centre.

The Saanich planning department is considering the application as well as a general plan for the area, which should be coming to council shortly.

Oil Coming Around Cape

LONDON (Reuters)—The British Petroleum Co. announced Thursday night a huge charter operation to keep oil supply lines open despite the closing of the Suez Canal.

British Petroleum has chartered 20 tankers to move oil from the Persian Gulf around the Cape of Good Hope at the bottom of Africa to British and other European ports.

New Holiday Called Confusion Day

The new Confederation Day holiday announced in Ottawa today could be termed Confusion Day here.

No one at the provincial or civic level knows yet whether the July 3 national holiday will result in an extra day off even for public servants let alone the public at large.

The problem arises because July 3 already has been selected as an unofficial holiday — the decision being taken by Victoria council only Thursday—for government employees.

The lead was given by the provincial cabinet sometime ago when it decided that because Dominion Day falls on a Saturday this year—and the federal legislation requires its observance that day — B.C.'s 19,000 provincial employees would be given Monday, July 3 off in lieu of Saturday when they're home anyway.

Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee this week recommended that all local municipal employees here be given the same treatment and it was expected that most employees in private firms would be given time off in lieu of July 1 or extra pay too.

But the surprise Ottawa announcement now poses the question of whether they also will get Tuesday off in lieu of July 3 to enlarge the long weekend to a super-long weekend.

Premier Bennett, Acting Provincial Secretary Kenneth Kiernan, Deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson and Civil Service Commission chairman Dr. Hugh Morrison—all the officials who might have a hand in the decision—were out of town today so nobody at the Legislative Buildings would hazard a guess at which way they may decide.

BY CABINET

"It will have to be decided by the cabinet," said Provincial Secretary Wesley Black, who was in town but in a convalescent bed at home following a post-session operation. "I can't adjudicate on that."

Assistant deputy labor minister C. R. Margison pointed out there is no legislation to act as a guide and "it's all a matter of collective agreements or city bylaws where they apply."

He said the old provisions listing compulsory closing days for manufacturing employees were eliminated in the general revision last session of the Factories Act and a new regulation specifying eight statutory holidays for almost all of B.C.'s 740,000 labor force doesn't go into effect until Aug. 1 and, in any event, doesn't provide for an extra holiday.

Greater Victoria municipalities no longer regulate general store and shop closing days although some have collective agreements which may define whether civic offices will have to close an extra day in lieu of the new holiday.

But both municipal officials and all company or union officials which have collective agreements will have to study the specific language of their contracts to find out if the Ottawa announcement dictates their action or whether management has the discretionary right to make its own decision.

Some contracts merely list the normal statutory holidays, while others also add wording to allow addition of any extra holidays proclaimed by any government level.

"In our case, we'll have to wait 10 days at least before we can make any decision because the council does not meet until the 19th," said Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox.

Hepatitis Can Follow Transfusion

By Dr. Walter C. Alvarez

Alvarez

Recently, Dr. E. Clinton Texter, Jr., of Northwestern Medical School in Chicago, wrote that in the United States in one year, there were some 86,000 cases reported of that often severe disease, serum hepatitis (an infection of the liver with a virus). Worse yet, there must have been more thousands of cases, some not correctly diagnosed, and many not reported. Hepatitis occurs in two forms, the infectious type, which is usually a mild disease, and the serious type, which is dangerous and in from six to 17 per cent (in different parts of the world) fatal.

The important point about serum hepatitis, which can occur with or without jaundice (a yellowing of the skin and the whites of the eyes), is that it is one of the major hazards that can follow the transfusion of blood. The incidence of the disease after transfusions appears to be, according to some statistical studies, as high as one in 25 cases.

As one would expect, serum hepatitis is most often seen in patients who have been given a number of transfusions.

A while ago, before we physicians learned how difficult it is to kill off or get the virus of serum hepatitis out of blood, many patients got the disease because someone used an inadequately sterilized hypodermic needle or lancet. Even the barber's razor sometimes transmitted the disease; and often the tatooer's needle did it.

* * *

Since for ever person with serum hepatitis and jaundice, there are from 10 to 20 persons with serum hepatitis but no jaundice, one can see how common this disease must be. With jaundice, the diagnosis of the disease is easy, but without it, the diagnosis may be missed.

Possibly one in 16 of our people is a carrier of the virus, without ever showing any symptoms of the disease. It is curious that hundreds of thousands of people who seem perfectly healthy can be carrying around in their bodies a virus which, when put into the veins of another person, can cause a very serious and sometimes fatal disease.

Naturally, through the years, in blood banks (where human blood is stored), great efforts have been made to kill the virus in the blood that has been given by kindly donors, but as yet, the problem remains largely unsolved. Efforts to find a test with which to recognize the person whose blood contains the virus also have failed.

Because of the terrible danger that goes with transfusions of blood, Dr. Texter agrees with many hematologists (blood experts) who say that transfusions should be given only when they are definitely needed to save life. Unfortunately, today thousands of transfusions are given, of only a pint of blood — an amount too small to do any good. All such a transfusion can do is perhaps to give the patient a serious disease.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Nancy Noble, age 10, of Charleston, West Virginia, for her question:

WHY IS IT SO HARD TO SWAT A FLY?

Even the most careful aim with a swatter often fails to whack the fly. You may swat at 10 of the bitsy pests and miss them all. But do not feel bitter or blame your aim. A fly is born with built-in gadgets that just about guarantee his escape from fly swatters.

A fly may be about a quarter of an inch long and, in flight, his gauzy wings measure no more than half an inch from tip to tip. It takes about a thousand flies just like him to weigh one ounce. But many a great white hunter can bring down a charging rhinoceros -- and fail to swat a fly. Most likely he used the wrong kind of swatter and aimed too far ahead. The best weapon for the job has a long, pliable handle and a swatting end that covers a long, wide area of several square inches. The best place to aim is half an inch behind the spot where the fly happens to be sitting. And the whack must be fast, very fast.

Mr. Fly takes off in a split second and you might think that he has eyes in the back of his head to warn him that a swatter is on the way. If you look at him under a magnifying glass, you may discover that this is almost true. Those two round bumps on his forehead are eyes. They are special compound eyes made from dozens of boxy little reflectors. They are placed to show a large area of the scenery, above and below and around the sides.

In addition to his big round compound eyes, the fly has three small simple eyes. They are not exactly in the back of his head. But they are on the top. The three of them form the corners of a triangle between and above the big compound eyes. The fly's vision is not sharp or clear. But with five eyes in his head he does not miss much of what goes on around him. He is sure to notice any suspicious movement of light and shadow in time to make a getaway.

Flies Carry Germs

You have no doubt watched him sitting there, quietly preening himself or carefully combing his hairy legs. The next moment he is airborne and flying across the room. He has, of course, six legs for the takeoff and he uses them to spring up as he opens his wings. However, a fast camera reveals a weakness in his speedy operation. The fly's legs are made so that the take-off jump must go in a backward direction. When you aim the swatter directly at him, he has time to escape and you hit the place where he was. But if you aim about a half an inch behind the spot where he is, you have a chance to whack him during take-off as he makes that jump backward. There are, however, several backward directions and you cannot be sure which one he will take. This is why the swatting end of our weapon should be big enough to cover a sizeable area.

Flies are pests that carry germs of all sorts on their sticky feet. We should do all we can to keep them out of the house and also prevent them from breeding in trash cans and garbage dumps. They can multiply at a staggering rate. They breed from April to September and during this season, one pair of flies can produce more than five billion offspring. Most of this horde, however, becomes food for birds and other animals. But there are enough survivors to endanger human health. When you swat a fly successfully, you prevent the birth of billions of future flies.

$1,800 Collected By School

More than $1,800 collected at the Kuper Island Indian School to assist its band to get to Expo will be turned in tonight when the band plays at S. J. Willis Junior High School.

Nearly $7,000 has been donated to the fund.

Sum of $3,386 has been turned in to the Bank of Nova Scotia here. The Chemainus branch has $150 and the provincial government has promised $1,000.

The Inter Service Club of Montreal gave the fund its biggest single boost by assuring the band of accommodation, food and admission to Expo.

Many firms and individuals have contributed. The target is $9,000.

Hardest working group has been the students of S. J. Willis Junior High School who have held many fund-raising projects by classes.

This evening the students' band will join the Indian musicians in a concert at the school starting at 8.

On Saturday the Indian band will play in Centennial Square at 2:30 p.m.

IT WAS SHOES, not apples, that were polished at S. J. Willis Junior High School Thursday when students held a shoeshine to raise funds to help send Kuper Island Indian Band to Expo. The project is one of many conducted by the school's classes to aid the fund drive.

OFFICIALS HUDDLE AT BRIDGE

CPR Frets About Floods Damaging Tracks, Depot

By DON DINGWALL

DUNCAN — A growing Cowichan River flood threat to CPR tracks and a merchandising service centre sparked an on-the-spot meeting Thursday.

Twenty-four representatives of government and industry met at the railway bridge across the Cowichan River near Allenby Road to hear CPR proposals for river bank protection.

A CPR spokesman said unless work can be done before fall the river could jump its banks just east of the Riverview Auto Court on Allenby Road and sweep down to join the Koksilah River behind the new Koksilah School.

Such flooding would wipe out considerable railway trackage and possibly isolate the CPR merchandising depot on Indian land.

An official of the provincial water resources branch said its recently publishd plan for a major flood control scheme from Lake Cowichan to Cowichan Bay would include protection of the area worrying the CPR.

But he said this over-all plan costing several million dollars will require the co-operation of different levels of government and other agencies and might take years to implement.

He suggested as a temporary measure heavy riprap in the area of the river near the CPR bridge.

Riprapping is the piling of heavy rocks — or criss-crossing of logs — against a bank to break the speed of water.

Represented at the Thursday meeting were North Cowichan and Duncan city councils, provincial highways, water resources and fisheries departments, Indian affairs branch, the CPR and private property owners.

MORE MEETINGS

Reeve Donald Morton of North Cowichan said today there will be further meetings to consider alternative CPR proposals.

The temporary riprap work might cost about $30,000.

Ronald Sampson, Cowichan agent of the Indian affairs branch, said the CPR proposals "looked good" and would certainly favorably affect reserve land in the area.

"Nothing was decided about which plan to follow.

"It was just a preliminary look at the situation.

"When there is a commitment regarding the work to be done agencies such as Cowichan Indian band will have to examine a cost-sharing formula."

Woman Killed in 3-Car Crash

NANAIMO—A three-car crash near Wellington, just north of here, left one woman dead and sent four others to hospital on Thursday.

Dead is Mrs. Alice Clayton, 49, of Northwest Bay near Parksville.

Her husband, fishing guide William Clayton, 54, is in fair condition in Nanaimo hospital.

Four-year-old Teresa Herman, of Port Alberni, was to be released from hospital today.

Her mother, Mrs. Evelyn Herman, 38, and Daniel Robert Burns, 24, of Nanaimo, were released after treatment.

Police said Mr. and Mrs. Clayton were heading north at the time of the acident.

Burns, alone in his car, was following.

OVERTAKING

RCMP said Burns apparently started overtaking the Clayton car but pulled back when he saw Mrs. Herman's car coming towards him.

In doing so he rear-ended the Clayton car which went out of control hitting the Herman car head-on.

Both front and rear ends of the Clayton car were crushed.

Mrs. Clayton was dead on arrival at hospital.

Mr. Clayton and his brother, Pitt, are proprietors of Clayton's fishing camp at Northwest Bay. They have been operating the resort since 1953.

Formerly they ran the Port Boathouse at Port Alberni.

No date has yet been set for an inquest.

'CEASE, DESIST' ORDER SOUGHT IN WALKOUT

Crown Zellerbach has applied to the Labour Relations Board for a cease and desist order against 170 loggers who walked out last Monday.

But the divisional manager at Courtenay, Mike Poje, said this procedure takes several weeks and he is sure the walkout will be over by then.

He added that the company has not sought an injunction against the loggers.

SUSPENSION

The walkout was triggered by the suspension of truck driver and IWA shop steward Ken Bader. The union said a supervisor was working alone on a booming ground when he shouldn't and was doing an hourly-paid worker's task. The company denied both charges.

Mr. Bader was suspended, said the company, because he "tore into" the supervisor.

The suspension was to have ended this morning but Mr. Poje said the suspension will carry on until four days after a return to work.

One of the five days suspension was worked off last Friday when the crew was at work, but since the crew walked out that left another four days to be completed, he said.

Driver Jailed For 14 Days

NANAIMO — Felix Joseph Page, 27, of Nanoose, was jailed here Thursday for 14 days and suspended from driving for one year.

He pleaded guilty in magistrates court to being in care and control of a vehicle while intoxicated.

Police found him asleep in his car on the Island Highway at Wellington. The key was in the ignition.

DUNCAN ROUNDUP

Fieldhouse Starts Soon

DUNCAN — The city's centennial project will soon be under way.

Meeting in camera this week, city council authorized the local firm of Pacific Drafting and Planning Service to draw up detailed plans of the fieldhouse for Wharncliffe Park.

Gordon Berry, city clerk, said the Duncan fieldhouse will follow closely the layout of the Carnarvon Park fieldhouse at Oak Bay.

It will have a shake roof and be finished in colored concrete block.

Total cost is estimated between $18,000 and $20,000 and Mr. Berry said it is hoped to put the job out to tender within the next two weeks.

Volunteer workers hope to start work Sunday on the change house for Bright Angel Park at Cowichan Station.

The 26-acre park is a centennial project of the South Cowichan unorganized area's centennial committee.

Art Burnett, chairman of the park board, said Thursday: "We hope to start pouring concrete Sunday for the change house.

"But we need more volunteer help."

Help has not been lacking. Last year volunteers put in over 500 hours clearing out dead bush.

There are 50 picnic tables under construction and the plan calls for 20 barbecue pits.

The board hopes to build a suspension bridge this year to connect the two land areas of the park wither side of the Koksilah River.

An Alberta theatre chain will re-open the former Sunset Drive-In on the Trans-Canada Highway three miles south of Duncan.

The drive-in has been closed since 1958.

Phil May, head of the new company, said Thursday: "We hope to open again to the public June 30.

"Vancouver Island is ideal for drive-in theatres because of the warm winters.

"The theatre here will be open 10 months of the year, seven nights a week." Mr. May said reconstruction on the 16-acre site will cost about $40,000.

The theatre will have 400 speakers and employ 12 full and part-time staff plus manager Bob McNeil.

Needle Injected Pointedly

The centennial gavel, which is travelling from community to community, had its most unusual trip of all this week.

Up to now the gavel has been carried by conventional methods.

Not so on northern Vancouver Island.

Under leadership of the Roads Committee of the Mount Waddington area, the gavel travelled from Alert Bay to Port McNeill, Monday by Indian war canoe to point out the lack of a ferry.

On Tuesday the gavel was carried from Port McNeill to Port Hardy on foot to emphasize the need for black-topped roads.

The departure of the gavel from Port Hardy to Port Alice was delayed until 6 p.m. to mark the fact the privately-owned logging road is closed during the day.

Syria, Israel Accept New Ceasefire Demand

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant told the United Nations Security Council today that Syria and Israel have both told him that they accept the council's ceasefire resolution passed earlier.

Israel's acceptance, however, contained the stipulation that Syria must accept and implement the ceasefire.

The reports were conveyed to Thant by the Israeli and Syrian ambassadors, Gideon Rafael and Georre Tomeh, respectively.

Tomeh had announced his country's acceptance earlier but he said attacks on Syria continued.

Tomeh said his foreign minister told him by telephone from Damascus that Israeli attacks "are increasing in their intensity and gravity by the minute."

He said he was told that Israeli planes are still bombing Damascus, Israeli paratroops had landed 20 miles inside Syrian territory and Israeli armored columns are on their way to join them.

The council also finally accepted a proposal put forward by Canada's George Ignatieff Wednesday that the UN make an active effort to win full compliance with the ceasefire.

Ignatieff made his proposal after the Security Council passed the second of two resolutions calling for a ceasefire on all Israeli-Arab borders.

On the Canadian proposal a Canadian source told reporters: "We can't have Thant just sitting here receiving cables."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg told the council it should have acted on Ignatieff's proposal two days ago when it was made.

"It is high time we utilized the resources of this organization to get this war stopped," he said.

Soviet Ambassador Nicolai Fedorenko interpreted the council's decision on the new resolution as "a new condemnation of Israeli aggression."

NEW TWIST

Pearson Urges UN Peace Force With Buffer Zone

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said today his suggestion that a United Nations force be interposed between Israelis and Arabs is a matter to be decided by the Security Council.

The UN Emergency Force was disbanded when the United Arab Republic asked for its withdrawal before fighting broke out with Israel this week, Mr. Pearson noted.

Whether it would be reconstituted or the UN would decide to expand its truce supervisory organization, still in being in the area, would remain a decision for the council.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who said a "satisfactory conclusion" of the Middle East fighting had been reached with most parties accepting the UN call for a ceasefire.

He asked what the situation is on a new UN peacekeeping force and whether Canada had offered to the UN the services of a mobile peacekeeping force.

HAS BEEN NO APPROACH

Mr. Pearson said no request had been made by the UN for such a force. He noted Canadian officers already serve on the truce supervisory organization.

Mr. Pearson Thursday had renewed his request that a United Nations force be interposed between warring Israel and the Arab states and added a new twist — a demilitarized zone as a buffer area between them.

The prime minister warned, however, that such a suggestion is only a temporary measure in resolving Arab-Israeli hostility.

With the United States committed to Israel's cause and Russia to that of the Arab states, any new conflict in the area carries the inherent danger of a head-on collision between the world's two major powers, he added.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker sought the special Middle East debate. It was arranged by jumping the 1967-68 spending estimates of the external affairs department ahead of other departments.

HITS FENCE STAND

Speaking after Mr. Pearson, the Conservative leader blistered the government for "trying diplomatically to be in agreement with both sides" in the dispute.

In almost the same breath he said Canada no longer is regarded "as a nation without a national interest, unbiased towards one side or the other."

And he made it clear that he found favor with the Israeli cause, quoting President Nas-

MONDAY SET

Holiday For July 1 Confirmed

See Story Page 32

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians were assured today of a day off for the July 1 holiday, but were left in doubt about the official name.

Is it Confederation Day or Dominion Day?

Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons the cabinet has proclaimed Monday July 3 as a public holiday because July 1 falls on Saturday, another day off for many Canadians.

The prime minister called it Confederation Day. Conservative Leader Diefenbaker asked sharply whether the cabinet had authorized also a change in name from Dominion Day.

Mr. Pearson did not reply and Mr. Diefenbaker later returned to the point, saying the statutes label July 1 Dominion Day.

Was the government "chiselling away" at Canada's heritage?

DIRTY WORD?

"I really can't answer such a picayune, chiselling question," Mr. Pearson replied.

"Is Dominion Day a dirty word now?" Mr. Diefenbaker retorted. There was no answer from the prime minister.

A formal announcement from the prime minister's office said the July 3 holiday was to mark "the centennial observance of Confederation Day," but did not elaborate.

July 1 is the 100th anniversary of Confederation.

A bill introduced by Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre) led to the exchange on names. The bill proposed that the name—whatever it is—be changed to Canada Day.

It also proposed that it be celebrated as it now is on July 1 except when that date is a Sunday. And in any year that July 1 falls on a Saturday, the following Monday would be set aside as the day off.

Israel Invades After Shelling Along Frontier

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Well informed Israeli military sources said tonight Israeli troops had reached the outskirts of Damascus.

(Times News Services)

TEL AVIV—Israeli iforces struck into Syria today and seized high ground overlooking the Sea of Galilee after charging the Syrians violated the ceasefire with a mortar barrage.

All fighting ceased on the main front along the Suez Canal after an Israeli army spokesman said Egyptians attacked east of the Suez Canal in the "central axis" and were repulsed. This presumably was in the area of Ismailia, Egyptian part in the centre of the canal.

Syria and Egypt, the last of the Arab combatants, accepted Thursday a UN Security Council demand for a ceasefire. Jordan, the third main Arab partner in the conflict, had dropped out of the war Wednesday.

Associated Press correspondent Hans Benedict, in the general area, saw the heavy artillery duel which broke the shaky ceasefire on the Syrian frontier this morning.

He said Syrian mortars in mid-morning opened fire on Israeli hilltop positions 20 miles north of the town of Tiberias, hours after Syria had announced acceptance of the ceasefire. The Israelis struck back and called in air attacks.

Radio Damascus, monitored in Israel, accused the Israelis of opening fire with artillery and aircraft and said: "We shelled their border settlements, demolished nine of their tanks, shot down one Mirage jet and destroyed a column of armor invading us."

JORDAN SAYS 15,000 DEAD IN FOUR DAYS

AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan said tonight 15,000 civilians and troops were kiled in the four-day war with Israel.

Foreign correspondents were called to Amman military hospital to see civilians and military personnel alleged to be suffering wounds caused by napalm dropped from Israeli planes.

A doctor said the Lutheran-run Augusta Victorio Hospital in Jerusalem and a hospital in Amman were hit by Israeli bombs.

He also said Israelis strafed a field hospital convoy as it returned to Amman and prevented it from picking up some 200 wounded on the way.

'Raise White Flags Over Homes'

The Arab language Jerusalem (Israeli) radio called on the population of Syria to raise white flags over their homes, "keep away from Syrian soldiers and vehicles and overthrow" the leftwing socialist Baath ruling party in Damascus.

Israel considers Syria's present leaders who seized power in a 1966 coup as ultra-nationalists who have no understanding of the outside world and directly responsible for the current Mideast war.

Damascus radio interspersed its broadcasts with comminique after communique claiming "heavy human and material losses" by the invading Israeli armies and exhorting the Syrians to fight on.

Syrian head-of-state Dr. Houreddin Attassi called on the Syrian people "to fight until death in the face of the foreign aggressors." He urged his people to "turn the world into an inferno in the face of the aggressors."

Speaking in an emotion-packed voice over Damascus radio, Attassi said the Syrian people are facing "a vile Anglo-American-Israeli plot to wipe out the gains of our people."

Attassi said the existence of the Arab world is endangered by "imperialist aggression" and urged Syrian soldiers "to turn . . . Syrian soil into a graveyard for the aggressors."

Damascus radio announced that Syrian forces downed an Israeli plane over Damascus.

Thant Confirms Damascus Raids

At the United Nations Secretary-General Thant informed the Security Council that Israeli planes attacked Damascus and bombed, strafed and napalmed other targets in Syrian territory.

Quoting intelligence received at 12:30 p.m. EDT from Lt. Gen. Odd Bull of Norway, chief of the UN Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO) in Palestine, Thant said that "at 1401 hours, Greenwich Mean Time (10:01 A.M. EDT), Damascus was having an air raid."

Thant gave the council a running series of reports on military developments, starting with a bulletin he received at 7:14 a.m. EDT that Syria reported "in spite of our acceptance of the cease-fire, we are being subjected to an Israeli attack along the whole length of

CAIRO (UPI)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser, his armed forces crushed in a lightning war with Israel, resigned tonight as president of the United Arab Republic. He told the nation he was assuming full responsibility for the "grave setback" suffered on the battlefield.

Also resigning with Nasser was his first vice-president and deputy commander of the U.A.R. armed forces, Marshal Abdel Hakim Amer.

Within minutes after Nasser's announcement on a nationwide television broadcast, demonstrations broke out all over blacked-out Cairo.

"We want Nasser . . . we want Nasser," the crowds shouted, calling on the 49-year-old strongman not to resign.

Men and women alike wept in the streets as they heard of the resignation of the man who was the most powerful and controversial Arab leader in modern history.

TOOK OVER IN '54

Nasser, who came to power in a 1954 coup, suggested in his dramatic speech that U.A.R. vice-president Zakaria Mohieddin replace him in the presidency.

Nasser, looking haggard, repeated his charges that the United States and Britain actively aided Israel in the Middle East war and claimed there was "no doubt" that aircraft from U.S. and British carriers in the Mediterranean had taken part.

"We had expected to be hit from the south and east," Nasser said, "but we were hit from the west."

(Both the United States and Britain have categorically denied Nasser's charges. The Israel defence ministry Thursday night said it had intercepted a phone conversation in which Nasser arranged to invent the charge of U.S. and British assistance to salvage his prestige. See story page 3.)

'GRAVE SETBACK'

Nasser, whose government accepted a UN cease-fire Thursday after a last ditch series of tank battles with the Israelis, near the Suez Canal, said he "could not hide the fact that Egypt had suffered a grave setback."

The Egyptian leader added:

WRECKAGE IN THE DESERT . . . . . . TESTIMONY OF ISRAELI VICTORY

'Mopping Them Up With as Little Blood as Possible'

By CHARLES TAYLOR
Toronto Globe and Mail

TEL AVIV — Inside the border of the Gaza Strip abandoned observation towers are mute witnesses to the failure of Canadian and other members of the United Nations Emergency Force to keep peace between Israel and Egypt.

In a wide swatch through the strip itself abandoned hulks of Egyptian tanks and trucks are fresher witnesses to the incredible and irresistable surge of the Israeli military spearhead at the star. of hostilities this week.

I travelled in the wake of the Israeli surge through the entire strip and further into Egypt. Everywhere victorious Israeli soldiers cheered and waved at the first foreign newsmen to record their remarkable exploit.

They swept through the strip in 36 hours, leaving sandy dunes littered with burned, smashed wrecks of Egyptian tanks, halftracks and trucks. Roads are covered with more wrecks, spent and live shells and bullets.

Past the strip and further inside Egypt heavy black smoke was rising from the town of El Arish as Israeli mortars were still lobbing shells into the town from its perimeter.

The Israeli offensive swept past El Arish leaving pockets of several hundred Egyptian snipers and other resisters. Said an Israeli colonel, "we're trying to mop them up with as much sweat and as little blood as possible."

Meanwhile the roads are choked with long convoys taking soldiers, guns and supplies farther into Egypt. Symbolically Israeli troops in trucks are munching large wheaten wafers called matzoth, which Jews eat at passover in memory of their exodus from Egypt 3,500 years ago.

"To Cairo, to Cairo," some shouted. Grimy and exultant they were all rejoicing in a victory as decisive as the Israeli surge into Sinai along the same route 11 years ago.

As they swept on they passed along truck columns bearing thousands of dejected forlorn Egyptian and Palestine liberation army captives.

At El Arish a young Israeli infantry captain said the Egyptians and Palestinians fought well and hard for the first hour or two. "Some even fougth to the last minute but most turned and ran. It was disgusting. As always they left their guns and even their shoes," he added, pointing to piles of shoes.

Not only their shoes. While some Egyptian tanks were burned to a crisp others, dug into emplacements, were abandoned intact, nets still covering their unused cannon. The Egyptians also abandoned soft drink cans taken from withdrawing UNEF troops which they had no time to drink. Israeli troops were guzzling these drinks as they surged further into Egypt.

Other testimony to the rapid Israeli advance can be seen in the deserted huts crudely made of branches with pathetic white flags. Their Bedouin occupants had fled into the desert. Only here and

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO (AP) — The apparent end of general hostilities in the Middle East caused a decline in grain futures prices on the Chicago board of trade today.

Wheat fell over 4 cents, soybeans more than 3½, corn about 2 and rye and oats about one. After the decline, most gains staged a comeback.

The price fall had already been established when news that President Nasser of the United Arab Republic had resigned reached the floor. There was small rally in prices but it was not sustained and near the close prices fell back again.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Most grain showed some rallying tendencies in late trading today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, recouping some of the early trading losses.

In the oilseeds, flax rallied although rapeseed was somewhat easier due to light action. There was moderate trade in oats and barley and rye received some stimulation from a reported sale to Norway.

Barley was the feature in the week's trade as exporters purchased large amounts, estimated at more than 5,000,000 bushels. The United Kingdom has purchases 1,000 tons of flaxseed and the report indicated the Norway Rye purchase amounted to between 4,000 and 5,000 tons.

MARKETS

Nasser Out, N.Y. Up

Wall Street prices improved this afternoon following news that President Nasser of Egypt had resigned. Trading was fairly active.

AT NEW YORK gainers outnumbered losers by about 7 to 4 and the Dow Jones industrial average erased a small loss and moved into plus territory.

The day began with a vigorous rally at the opening in a follow-through to the late news Thursday of the Egyptian acceptance of a ceasefire. The advance ran out of steam quickly, however, and prices softened.

Nasser's resignation was merely another item in the series of events favoring Israel since the start of Middle East hostilities on Monday, brokers said, and the question remained as to how a durable peace will be worked out. Caution increased because of the coming weekend.

AT VANCOUVER Coronet rose .05 to a new high of $1.93.

Placer was up $3.62 to $36.37, Dynasty improved .30 to $7.65 and Pyramid was .10 better at $3.75.

On the down side, Bethex, at .71 and Magnum, .64, both dipped .04.

B. C. Telephone was .50 better at $65.50 in the industrials where Trans Mountain fell .37 to $18.62.

In the oils, Bata Resources was active and put on .12 to $1.32.

AT TORONTO oil stocks moved lower while uraniums advanced in light mid-afternoon trading.

Analysts attributed the drop in oils to profit taking and the feeling among investors that Arab oil producing countries must re-open trade with Europe and America or ruin their own economies. Analysts said if sales resume there will be dimininished opportunities for expanded Canadian oil sales.

Dome lost 1 to 55¾, Shell ½ to 27½, Home B ¾ to 21½ and Husky and Imperial Oil ⅛ each to 15⅞ and 59½.

Among uraniums, Denison rose 2½ to 74½, Roman Corp. 1 to 21¼, Rio Algom ¼ to 34¼, and Preston ⅛ to 20⅞.

Cominco dropped 1⅛ to 31⅝ in base metals after declaring a semi-annual dividend of 80 cents a share. Formerly the company paid 90 cents a share semi-annually.

Industrial issues made small advances with Moore Corp. up ¾ to 28⅞ and Bramalea ⅝ to 11.

AT MONTREAL most sections began moving higher in intensified trading towards 2 p.m. today.

AT LONDON the Egyptian acceptance of a ceasefire in the Middle East plus hopes for reflationary moves by the British government helped the stock market to move to firmer ground today.

Arthur Mayse

Like many another husband who enjoys a happy marriage, I sometimes look back along the road we have travelled together and thank the powers for diverting a variety of tigers from our door.

One of these is starvation, which might have been our fate had we not found the sense to enlarge our contract by an extra clause.

This stipulated that my dear one would take the task of administering our finances out of my hands.

We have clung to that arrangement ever since, good times and bad, and I would as soon have the roof fall in than depart from it. It might not work in your menage, but it does in ours, for a reason which I am perfectly ready to confess.

Time and experience have only served to underline the fact that I'm no better equipped to handle money than a monkey.

Nor am I alone in this failing. There is, in fact, a breed of men who without conscious effort, can take a ten-spot and shrink it to a nickel and three pennies before you can say "Waste not, want not."

★

By the end of our first wedded month, I had managed to demonstrate my prowess as a money-melter so effectively that with payday still a week off, our funds were reduced to nine cents.

Confronted by this situation, Win accepted it calmly. She searched her handbag and came up with a tarnished nickel ... mine never stuck with me long enough to tarnish.

"We have some potatoes," she said, "and sausage is 14 cents at the corner market. We'll see how far we can stretch a pound."

So off I went, jingling our fortune in my pocket, to the market a block away. The meat counter was crowded, but finally it came my turn.

The butcher wrapped a pound of sausage, I brought out my money, and found that it had shrunk in transit, by a process that still baffles me, to 13 cents.

I was counting again, hoping against hope that the total would come out right this time, when my ears caught a whisper from behind:

"That poor boy ... He hasn't enough ..."

Then a matronly hand reached past my elbow, and deposited another penny in my palm.

Shaken, I fled with our sausages, which with the aid of a minute but timely cheque from a Sunday school paper publisher, saw us through. And on pay-day, at my suggestion, we added that clause to our marriage vows.

★

All this was quite some time ago, as the 14-a-pound sausage price will indicate to anyone who keeps an eye on the food ads. Although there have been months when I backslid, the mere suggestion that perhaps it would be better if I took care of the accounts has worked instant reformation.

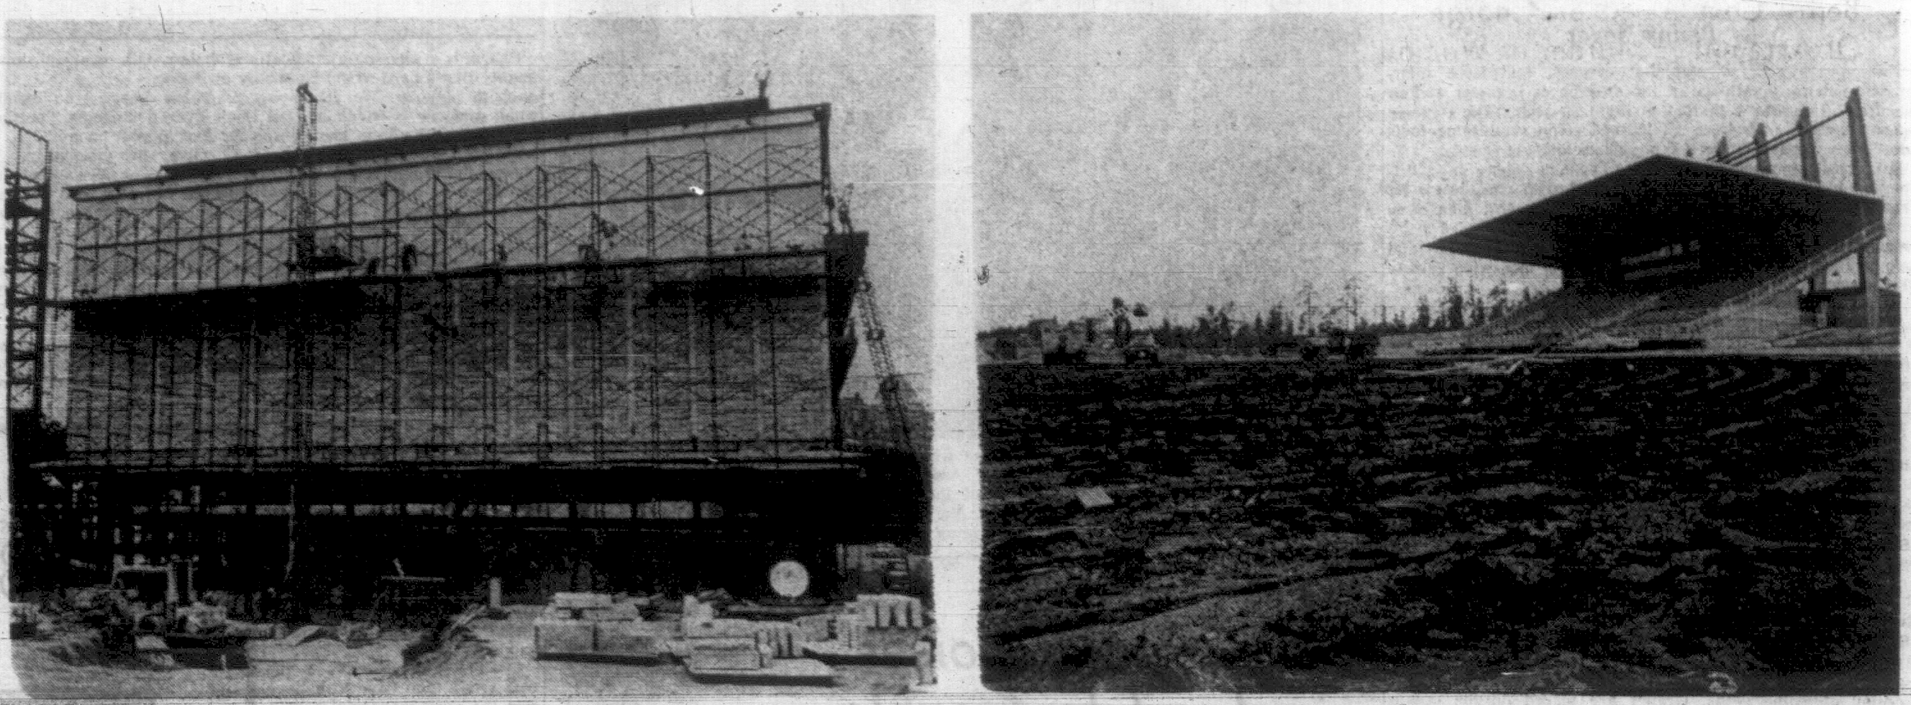
All too well, I can see myself still hopelessly struggling to cope with one set of bills while another is wadded forgotten in my pocket and a third is already on the way.

One time or another, along with a great many men who have learned where the business brains are in the family, I run into an exaggerated he-man type who scoffs at this delegating of responsiblity as a Milquetoast tactic.

Not so: it is merely a sensible return to the natural division of labor. It is for man, the hunter, to bag the elusive buck; but when he fetches it home, his duty is accomplished.

Naturally — and I add this as a warning — the administration clause that works so well for so many isn't for everyone.

The too-easy spender whose wife also happens to be a money-melter had better hang tough, hope for the best, and keep a batch of candles handy for when they cut the power.



Makeup and Breakup to Add Splendour to Centennial Projects

Workmen are busy this week giving the treatment to two of Victoria's centennial projects.

Operation Face Blender has started on Centennial Museum and Operation Facelift is well under way at Centennial Stadium.

The museum is being covered with the same stone that decorates the Legislative Buildings. Lower courses are of Nelson Island granite but most of the rock veneer is sandstone from the Haddington Island quarry specifically re-opened for this $375,000 operation.

Both islands are near Alert Bay.

White marble will fill the vertical spaces. Newly-cut stone veneer has revived talk of steam-cleaning nearly 70 years of grime coating the Legislative Building exterior.

Meanwhile at the University of Victoria the smooth blacktop laid for the Centennial Tattoo has taken on a plowed field appearance.

The blacktop was laid because there wasn't time to plant grass and attain an adequate turf.

The cost of laying and removing the blacktop—about $10,000—is being paid by the federal government.

The blacktop being removed will be used as fill for a new road connecting Ruby Road with the Ring Road, which surrounds the university campus.

Youth Jailed On Drug Count

18 Months for Trafficking; 'Wish You Well,' Says Judge

A 19-year-old Victorian, who had never been in trouble with the police before, was today sentenced to 18 months definite and 18 months indefinite in the Young Offenders' Unit at Oakalla jail.

Roger F. Hunter, 19, of 724 Yates Street, had been found guilty of being in possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

"I am concerned for your welfare and I personally wish you well," Mr. Justice Victor Dryer told Hunter after passing sentence in B.C. Assize Court here.

"The term you will actually serve will depend on how you act and on your attitude. I am being as lenient with you as I possibly can."

Hunter—a dark, neatly dressed youth— did not speak, but his counsel, Alan Bigelow, said he was "humbly and deeply sorry."

"He assures me this will never happen again," Mr. Bigelow said.

A jury of three women and nine men returned a verdict of guilty of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking at 10:55 Thursday night.

Jury Deliberated for 12 Hours

The jury had deliberated on its verdict for nearly 12 hours. It had to consider the charge in two stages—first, possession, then trafficking.

Mr. Bigelow called four character witnesses all of whom spoke of Hunter as a youth of good character who had never been in trouble before.

Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley, minister of Fairfield United Church, said:

"This is something I don't understand. He is not the kind of boy who would normally be in trouble. He is mannerly, quiet and not troublesome at all."

Mr. Bigelow said Hunter had never been charged or convicted of any offence before.

"This is a first offence, and it is my submission that he has been mixing with the wrong people. It is most unlikely that he will ever commit such an offence again."

Mr. Bigelow added that Hunter had been in custody since April 20 when he was arrested with some other youths at an abandoned house at Ten-Mile Point.

Crown counsel Rodney Taylor said a sentence in the penitentiary would be appropriate but, because of Hunter's youth, he was eligible for treatment in the Young Offenders' Unit.

Life in Prison Maximum Term

Mr. Justice Dryer told Hunter the maximum sentence for trafficking in drugs is life imprisonment.

"I want to make you realize that the people of Canada consider this a very serious crime. We are all subject to these laws and you are no exception. If you were an adult, I would sentence you to a long term of imprisonment.

"At 19 you are not quite an adult, but you are getting close to the time when you must accept responsibility for your actions.

"You look younger than 19 and it may be you are younger than 19 so far as wisdom is concerned. Some people grow up more quickly than others.

"Several good people have come forward to speak for you and you owe something to them as well as to the community."

Earlier in the trial, RCMP Constable Donald Kennedy told of disguising himself as a prisoner named "Wes Freeman" and conversing with Hunter in the cells at Saanich police station.

He said Hunter told him, if he ever wanted to make easy money, he could sell marijuana to teeny-boppers (youths in their early teens).

The jury first left the court at 11:44 a.m. Thursday after hearing an hour-long charge from Mr. Justice Dryer. It returned at 12:48 and asked the judge for a legal definition of the term "possession."

A verdict of guilty of possession was returned at 4:05 p.m.

Crown counsel Taylor and defence counsel Bigelow then addressed the jury on the second part of the charge — trafficking.

Mr. Justice Dryer again addressed the jury on the second part. The jury retired at 5:05 p.m. and returned at 5:50 p.m. to ask further questions of the judge on points of law and hear the transcript of evidence given by RCMP Constable Kennedy.

Woman Seeks $705 Damages From Doctors

Claims Wrist Jammed In Operating Table

A Courtenay woman is claiming damages from The Sisters of St. Ann and three Victoria surgeons for injuries sustained during an operation at St. Joseph's Hospital on Jan. 14, 1964.

St. Joseph's is operated by the Sisters of St. Ann.

Mrs. Gladys Knight, the wife of Percy N. Knight, claims her right wrist was jammed and crushed in some part of the operating table mechanism while she was undergoing an operation for laminectomy (protruding disc).

In Victoria Law Courts Thursday, Gerald Lauder, her counsel, asked Mr. Justice George Gregory to award Mrs. Knight special damages of $705 to cover medical expenses resulting from her injury.

Mr. Lauder also asked for unspecified general damages because of "extensive pain and suffering" caused.

Lloyd McKenzie is appearing for St. Joseph's Hospital; E. E. Hinkson for Dr. Rudolph Anderson, Dr. Neville Grant and Dr. Harold Carter, all orthopedic surgeons.

Mr. Lauder said Dr. Grant was her physican and the operation was performed by Dr. Anderson and Dr. Carter.

The operation was carried out at her own request and she agreed to pay the regular medical fees.

JAMMED, CRUSHED

On recovering from anaesthesia, Mrs. Knight learned that her wrist had been jammed and crushed in some part of the operating table mechanism, owned and used by the hospital.

Mr. Lauder said the mechanism caused damage to her right arm, wrist and hand and to the nerve system in her right arm and hand.

He alleged that the operating table was in a negligent condition, or was negligently and unskilfully handled, used or operated.

Mr. Lauder claimed the hospital and its surgeons were responsible for all equipment in the operating room.

Mr. Justice Gregory interposed.

"I am inclined to the view that the hospital and its doctors are entitled to rely on the competence of the anaesthetist to see that a patient is properly placed on the operating table."

Mr. Justice Gregory reserved judgment.

Escaping Charge Withdrawn

Charges of escaping lawful custody and unlawfully being at large were withdrawn in central court today in order not to upset deportation proceedings against the accused.

Josef Moche Benes, 29, at William Head prison following a three-year sentence for bank robbery, escaped early Tuesday morning and was caught Thursday morning. He admitted the charges and said he was anxious to get back to his homeland to fight for Israel.

Crown prosecutor John Macintyre, asking for withdrawal of the charges, said that further sentence would mean the deportation proceedings would be interrupted.

He said Benes would be charged by prison authorities with "walking away" from custody, an offence which called for internal handling and would not hamper the deportation proceedings.

Motorcycle Show

A motorcycle display will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in Beaver Lake Park in Saanich opposite Haliburton Road.

The display will be staged by the Victoria Motorcycle Club and is sponsored by the Saanich Centennial Committee.

ORCHESTRA HIRED NOT TO PLAY ON JUNE 31

Pledge: No Thick Heads After No Ball Ball

By TED GASKELL

Victoria wives, thanks to the Beaver Kiwanis Club, will get a chance to save their husbands at least $15 this month.

By buying a ticket to stay home.

The club, in an effort to raise funds for the Kiwanis Handicapped Children's Camp at Cowichan, is selling $10 tickets to a No Ball Ball for which people buy tickets but don't go.

"Usually when a couple goes to a ball the evening costs about $25 with the baby sitter, dinner, corsage and perhaps drinks," said the club's No Ball Ball chairman Len LeDoux. "This way we are saving husbands the $15 they would pay on incidentals."

"It will be a very posh affair. We quite expect that everybody in Victoria's 400 will not attend.

"We have already made arrangement not to use the Empress Ballroom and a caterer has been engaged not to supply refreshments."

Club members feel that many prominent people in Victoria have great demands on their time and are called upon to attend many functions.

This way we can give them a night off, the club feels. If anyone phones them and asks them to attend an official function they have a ready made excuse. They can say "sorry we're engaged tonight. We booked to stay away from Date for the No-Ball is June Ball."

At present the club is working through the musicians union to hire an orchestra to keep quiet that night.

Date for the NoBall is June 31.

Invitations to stay away have gone out and the club is expecting acceptances to come in almost immediately.

The service organization's camp is a $100,000 project and so far a good deal has been given in land, use of machinery and labor. Another $40,000 is still required to ready the camp for the handicapped children.

Court Rejects Dismissal Bid

Shooting Trial Ordered

See Earlier Story Page 16

A plea for dismissal on the grounds intent had not been proved in an attempted murder charge was rejected by Magistrate William Ostler in central court this morning.

He committed taxi driver Frank Bedry for trial in a higher court.

The defence motion was made by W. A. Woods at the end of a comparatively brief preliminary hearing in which no defence was offered and no cross examination was made.

The charge arose from the wounding of Constable Harry Hoshal at 572 John Street, on May 4, when city police laid siege to the house and were held at bay by a man with a gun.

Constable Hoshal, now recovering from a bullet wound in his abdomen, told the court he went to the house with Inspector Lester Clark. Both were in uniform and day was just breaking.

NO RESPONSE

Several times the officers called Bedry to come out but there was no response. They entered the house and Constable Hoshal said he saw a knife with a bent blade sticking in the door jamb. He removed it and as he placed it on a nearby fridge, four shots were fired.

Constable Hoshal said he was hit by the first shot, left the scene and was taken to hospital.

In calling out to Bedry he said he identified himself as a city policeman and by name.

Inspector William Andrews said he was at the scene and had called out several times over a loud hailer for Bedry to come out. He also identified himself. There was no response.

TEAR GTS

Later, after tear gas shells were fired into the house, he saw the front door was open and Bedry was lying face down with his head outside.

Inspector Andrews said he saw no one else leave the house. He added that Inspector Clark gave him a .22 automatic rifle and three shell casings.

Dale Hayton, sporting goods store proprietor, told the court he had sold Bedry a similar rifle in April.

Det. Sgt. Norman Bath said he had charged Bedry with attempted murder and had cautioned him. Bedry denied shooting anyone.

Tennis Tournament

A centennial tennis tournament will be held on Young People's day, July 1, for players 16 years and under in Beacon Hill Park.

Entry forms, which can be obtained from the Greater Victoria centennial committee, must be returned by June 24. Trophies will be awarded.

'GRAND SCALE' COPPER THEFT BRINGS 3½-YEAR JAIL SENTENCE

Theft of nearly $15,000 worth of copper wire from Alberta Government Telephones sent a man to jail today for three and one-half years.

"This is theft on a grand scale," said Magistrate William Ostler, passing sentence on William Head inmate William Belcourt of Alberta Beach, Alberta.

The accused, who pleaded guilty to the charge of theft over $50, has a record going back to 1937.

Police said insulated copper telephone cable worth $14,968 was stolen from the yard in August last year, cut into 150-foot lengths and the insulation burned off, before being sold to scrap dealers in Edmonton.

Federation Strength Decreases by 10% As Locals Suspended

The B.C. Federation of Labor lost 10 per cent of its strength today.

The suspension of four locals of the International Woodworkers of America went into effect.

The locals—Victoria, Duncan, Vancouver and the lumber inspectors — were given until today to apologize for a joint public criticism by their presidents of a Canadian Labor Congress vice-president.

The statement, in April, strongly criticized Joe Morris—a former IWA regional president for his actions in the Gold River certification battle on Vancouver Island.

The suspensions, without precedent, were authorized by the federation's executive council late last month.

The four locals, with a combined membership of 13,000, have not made any public apology. The four presidents have said they will not do so and their position has been endorsed by their union members.

A spokesman for the B.C. Federation of Labour confirmed this morning there has been no change in the situation since the suspension ultimatum was announced two weeks ago.

Duncan IWA president Weldon Jubenville said the same, and repeated there will be no apology.

The federation executive said the four presidents contravened convention-approved policy.

A resolution passed at the 1965 federation convention resolved that affiliated unions "keep their troubles out of the public eye and present a united front to management."

City Force To Host Police Talks

An American university will hold its annual police seminar in Victoria June 21-23.

The Victoria city police department will act as host for the seminar of the Northwestern University traffic institute of Evanston, Ill.

Most of those attending are senior police and motor vehicle branch personnel who have graduated from the institute.

They are from B.C. and the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

Traffic institute director James Slavin will attend and there will be a number of speakers from all parts of North America. There will be panel discussions on all aspects of police administration, traffic and related techniques.

Insp. Brooke Douglass of the Victoria police will act as local chairman, assisted by Staff Supt. Alan Rossiter of the Vancouver police.

Mayor Hugh Stephen and Attorney-General Robert Bonner will address the meeting.

Lakes Closed For Spraying

Elk and Beaver lakes will be closed for swimming between noon and 8 p.m. Monday.

This is to allow Saanich crews to spray the waters to control algae, said senior parks supervisor Lloyd Sinclair.

"There has always been an algae problem but we're really going to work on keeping it under control," he said.

After the algae has been attacked, the parks department will turn its attention to the weeds.

Welsh Will Sing

Victoria Cymrodorion (Welsh) Society will hold its annual Gymanfa Ganu (sacred song festival) at the Salvation Army Citadel, Pandora Avenue, June 18 at 2 p.m.

Welsh hymns will be sung in Centennial Square the same day at 8:30 p.m.

Ask The Times

Q. Is the custom of awarding Freedom of the City military in origin? E. M-G.

A. Yes, says the army. It comes from medieval days when cities were walled as a protection against invaders. It was a mark of friendship if the army of a neighboring community was granted the privilege of marching freely through city bearing its swords, pikes and halberds. Upon receiving Freedom of a City, the military unit so honored is privileged to march through the city at any time with flags flying, drums beating and bearing arms without first having to ask permission from civic officials.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

The war in the Middle East has claimed the lives of at least three reporters.

War, of course, doesn't differentiate between the soldier and the non-combatant but the soldier is more susceptible to death because it is a part of his environment.

Stephen

Of the trio killed in the Middle East affair, Ted Yates, the NBC-TV producer-reporter, was the best known to the television viewing masses.

His contributions to the media in the field of brilliant documentaries were many.

His most recent work appeared during the past season. It was the three-part project, "The Battle for Asia."

The three telecasts, "Thailand: The New Front," "Laos: The Forgotten War" and "Indonesia: The Troubled Victory," were objective, non-partisan reports of merit about the communist expansion in Southeast Asia and America's involvement there.

Some of his other award-winning documentaries included "The Congo: Victim of Independence," and "The Undeclared War," which focused on the social and political unrest in the Central American countries of Guatemala and Columbia.

Yates also made "Santo Domingo: War Among Friends," an account of developments in the Dominican Republic in chronological order.

Another of his remembered documentaries was "Vietnam: It's a Mad War." This was among the first tele-documentaries to disclose the reasons for the fighting in Vietnam.

He also co-produced "Our Man on the Mississippi," a tour of the famous river with David Brinkley and "The Journals of Lewis and Clark," which re-created the historic expedition that opened up the Pacific Northwest.

His death will rob television of a producer of documentaries of unparalleled quality.

It is an unfortunate price to be paid by any newsman who goes out to cover a story, in this case, to be caught in the whorl of war.

Committee Drafting Wider Divorce Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A draft bill widening the grounds for divorce will form part of a 250-page report on divorce laws to be issued shortly by a special parliamentary committee.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (L — Ontario), committee co-chairman, expressed the hope Thursday the committee's draft bill will be accepted by the government and introduced for debate in the fall.

The committee held its first meeting of the 1967 session Thursday and re-elected Senator Roebuck and A. J. P. Cameron (L—Toronto High Park) as co-chairmen.

The joint group held extensive public hearings last year and a draft report will be discussed at closed meetings next week before being tabled in the Commons and Senate.

The committee is expected to recommend that grounds for divorce be extended to cruelty, desertion and other marital faults.

LAW UNCHANGED

Canada's divorce laws are largely unchanged from 1867 and limit grounds to adultery, except in rare cases of cruelty or perversion.

Senator Roebuck said the report contains considerable background information on divorce laws in Britain, the United States and many other countries. There was also a detailed draft divorce bill for Canada and sections on "human philosophy."

The document was written with help from justice department lawyers. The confidential draft must still be approved or modified by the full 24-member committee.

Program In Parks This Summer

More than 3,000 Saanich youngsters are expected to enroll in a crafts and sports program in the municipality this summer.

Lloyd Sinclair, Saanich's senior parks supervisor, has hired 32 high school girls and married women to run the program. It starts July 4 in the municipality's 19 parks.

The sessions will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Supervisors and assistants are now being briefed on their duties and will attend a seminar June 17 on the objectives of the summer plans.

Saanich will supply the materials for the arts and crafts sessions. Children enrolling should be between the ages of five and 14 and must have the consent of their parents.

Swimming instruction is part of the program and at the end of the summer a swimming meet with participants from Saanich, Oak Bay, Victoria and Esquimalt will be held.

An "open house" will also be held in Hampton Park at the end of the season where parents will see the results of the crafts program.

A child wishing to enroll need only to go to his neighborhood park 10 a.m. July 4.

CONGRESSMAN SHOOTS COLLEAGUE IN CHEST

BRASILIA (AP)—A Brazilian congressman shot a colleague Thursday during a hand-to-hand struggle in a hall of the Congress building.

Security officers said Deputy Nelson Carneiro shot Deputy Eustacio Souto Maior twice in the chest outside an office of the Brazilian Democratic Movement, the country's only opposition party. Doctors at a hospital to which Souto Maior was taken said his life was not in danger.

Acquaintances said Souto Maior slapped Carneiro in the face during a dispute a week ago.

Impaired Driver Jailed

Richard Good, 40, of 330 Niagara, was jailed for six months Thursday when he appeared in central court for sentence on an impaired driving conviction.

He was stopped by police April 18 when his car was spotted weaving on Government and Wharf Streets.

The accused has previous convictions for driving offences, including impaired driving, court was told.

Hughie McIsaac, 2685 Sooke Rd., was fined $400 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

His truck was seen to cross the centre line on three occasions Wednesday night while police followed it for half a mile on Sooke Road. McIsaac's driving licence was also suspended.

Fined $45 was Richard Jones of 39 Lewis St. when he pleaded guilty to careless driving.

He was arrested and spent the night in jail after police spotted him speeding on Cook near Dallas.

Jones' defence counsel, Robert Price, said his client had not been allowed to phone for a lawyer until he had been in the jail three hours and that an arrest in a careless driving case was unusual.

He did not argue when Prosecutor John Macintyre said he had investigated the circumstances of the arrest and found the police had acted "in a perfectly proper manner" and there was a reason for the arrest which he did not want to detail.

Landreville Pension Hint Sparks New Ottawa Fray

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Leo Landreville has resigned from the Ontario Supreme Court amid government indications that he may get a life pension of $18,666 a year.

LANDREVILLE
. . . health key test

The 57-year-old judge and one-time Sudbury mayor resigned just as the Senate was scheduled to open debate Thursday on an unprecedented motion to unseat him for alleged improper conduct in stock dealings.

Opposition spokesmen in both houses served notice they will fight any government move to award the judge a special pension.

Justice Minister Trudeau announced in the Commons that the government had accepted the resignation, effective June 30. Asked about a possible pension, he replied amid opposition hoots:

"I think it is very much the type of matter to which the government might well give some consideration."

At a press conference later, the minister said he would have to weigh arguments for and against a pension.

Justice Landreville said in his letter: "After five difficult years and appearing in seven hearings, my health and wealth are impaired. I cannot continue."

He said the controversy arising from his $117,000 stock market windfall 10 years ago destroyed his usefulness as a judge, but reaffirmed his innocence of any wrongdoing.

His integrity or conduct in hearing court cases had never been questioned.

"In my personal life as mayor, solicitor or citizen, I repeat emphatically and reaffirm my innocence of any wrongdoing in law or ethics. But I cannot remove unfounded suspicions."

He thanked the residents of Sudbury for their "continued confidence and persistence in defending me."

The judge dated his resignation letter in Ottawa Wednesday and was unavailable for comment Thursday. His wife said in Toronto he was still in Ottawa, but a local hotel said he checked out Thursday morning.

The resignation was announced in the Commons about 30 minutes before the Senate was expected to open a long and bitter impeachment debate.

Senator Daniel Lang (L—Toronto), co-chairman of a special Commons - Senate committee that recommended the judge's removal in March, quickly withdrew his impeachment motion filed Tuesday night.

The resolution made two accusations against the judge:

—That he had failed to remove "grave suspicion of impropriety" arising from his acceptance in early 1957 of 7,500 shares in Northern Ontario Natural Gas Co. free of charge. He sold the stock later for $117,000.

—That the manner in which he testified at a 1962 hearing by the Ontario Securities Commission and the resulting perjury trial of Ralph Farris, then NONG president, constituted "a gross contempt of the tribunals concerned and a serious violation of his personal duty as a judge."

Both charges were originally made last August by Ivan Rand, retired justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, in a slashing report on a lengthy judicial inquiry. Mr. Rand accused the judge of helping NONG to get the Sudbury gas franchise while he was mayor in 1956 and of giving evasive testimony in subsequent investigations.

ELEVATED TO BAR

Justice Landreville negotiated the gas franchise with Mr. Farris during several months in 1956, then resigned as mayor to accept his appointment to the bench in October that year.

NONG's tangled stock transactions were the subject of two investigations by the Ontario Securities Commision; one by the British Columbia Securities Commission; a preliminary hearing and trial resulting in Mr. Farris' conviction and jail sentence for perjury; a closed inquiry by the Upper Canada Law Society in 1965; the Rand inquiry last year; the parliamentary hearings this year and a 1964 preliminary hearing on a charge of municipal corruption against Justice Landreville. The charge was dismissed because the judge received nothing from NONG while he was still mayor.

COULD QUALIFY

Mr. Trudeau told reporters Thursday that the judge could qualify for a pension of $18,666. two-thirds of his $28,000 salary, only for health reasons.

Justice Landreville offered to resign earlier this year if he were awarded a pension. The reference to "impaired health and wealth" in his resignation letter appeared to be a request for a pension.

EDITOR CHARGES:

Press Hindered In Expo Probe

MONTREAL (CP) — Maurice Dagenais, managing editor of La Presse, spoke out Thursday against individuals and public bodies who "manoeuvre in a subtle way . . . to restrict access to sources of information."

As examples he cited the Montreal executive committee, which meets behind closed doors, and the Quebec government.

In his address to a Montreal service club, Mr. Dagenais also referred to an investigation by La Presse which resulted in the publication March 23 of a story saying police were investigating fraudulent activities affecting the accommodation of Expo visitors, an operation which could "involve a sum exceeding $1,000,000."

He said reporters on the staff of the French-language daily learned that "all was not on the level in the field of reservation of accommodations for Expo." They had launched a painstaking investigation and had come up with "some extremely disquiting facts."

DID ITS DUTY

"La Presse wanted to do its duty and present to the public all the facts it was possible to discover.

"The commissioner-general of Expo, Mr. Pierre Dupuy, denounced this story on the basis of the fact that a certain police investigation had discovered no fraud in Logexpo.

"And yet, was it not discovered later that some motels were non-existent, that tourists were unable to find the motel they had planned to stay at during their visit to Montreal? Who can say today that all was honest in the gigantic operation of room reservations for Expo?"

Mr. Dagenais said that if La Presse reporters had had access to all sources of information, the newspaper could have presented a more exact account, "the public would have been better informed, the errors could have been corrected, and the reputation of Montreal and of Canada would have been intact."

Mr. Dagenais said Mr. Dupuy had complained about the skepticism of local newspapers toward Expo while his right-hand man, Deputy Commissioner-General Robert Shaw, had said publicly that newspapers were among the main reasons for Expo's success.

Syria, Israel Accept New Ceasefire Demand

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant told the United Nations Security Council today that Syria and Israel have both told him that they accept the council's ceasefire resolution passed earlier.

Israel's acceptance, however, contained the stipulation that Syria must accept and implement the ceasefire.

The reports were conveyed to Thant by the Israeli and Syrian ambassadors, Gideon Rafael and Georre Tomeh, respectively.

Tomeh had announced his country's acceptance earlier but he said attacks on Syria continued.

Tomeh said his foreign minister told him by telephone from Damascus that Israeli attacks "are increasing in their intensity and gravity by the minute."

He said he was told that Israeli planes are still bombing Damascus, Israeli paratroops had landed 20 miles inside Syrian territory and Israeli armored columns are on their way to join them.

The council also finally accepted a proposal put forward by Canada's George Ignatieff Wednesday that the UN make an active effort to win full compliance with the ceasefire.

Ignatieff made his proposal after the Security Council passed the second of two resolutions calling for a ceasefire on all Israeli-Arab borders.

On the Canadian proposal a Canadian source told reporters: "We can't have Thant just sitting here receiving cables."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg told the council it should have acted on Ignatieff's proposal two days ago when it was made.

"It is high time we utilized the resources of this organization to get this war stopped," he said.

Soviet Ambassador Nicolai Fedorenko interpreted the council's decision on the new resolution as "a new condemnation of Israeli aggression."

Pearson Urges UN Peace Force With Buffer Zone

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said today his suggestion that a United Nations force be interposed between Israelis and Arabs is a matter to be decided by the Security Council.

The UN Emergency Force was disbanded when the United Arab Republic asked for its withdrawal before fighting broke out with Israel this week, Mr. Pearson noted.

Whether it would be reconstituted or the UN would decide to expand its truce supervisory organization, still in being in the area, would remain a decision for the council.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who said a "satisfactory conclusion" of the Middle East fighting had been reached with most parties accepting the UN call for a ceasefire.

He asked what the situation is on a new UN peacekeeping force and whether Canada had offered to the UN the services of a mobile peacekeeping force.

HAS BEEN NO APPROACH

Mr. Pearson said no request had been made by the UN for such a force. He noted Canadian officers already serve on the truce supervisory organization.

Mr. Pearson Thursday had renewed his request that a United Nations force be interposed between warring Israel and the Arab states and added a new twist — a demilitarized zone as a buffer area between them.

The prime minister warned, however, that such a suggestion is only a temporary measure in resolving Arab-Israeli hostility.

With the United States committed to Israel's cause and Russia to that of the Arab states, any new conflict in the area carries the inherent danger of a head-on collision between the world's two major powers, he added.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker sought the special Middle East debate. It was arranged by jumping the 1967-68 spending estimates of the external affairs department ahead of other departments.

HITS FENCE STAND

Speaking after Mr. Pearson, the Conservative leader blistered the government for "trying diplomatically to be in agreement with both sides" in the dispute.

In almost the same breath he said Canada no longer is regarded "as a nation without a national interest, unbiased towards one side or the other."

And he made it clear that he found favor with the Israeli cause, quoting President Nas-

MONDAY SET

Holiday For July 1 Confirmed

See Story Page 32

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians were assured today of a day off for the July 1 holiday, but were left in doubt about the official name.

Is it Confederation Day or Dominion Day?

Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons the cabinet has proclaimed Monday July 3 as a public holiday because July 1 falls on Saturday, another day off for many Canadians.

The prime minister called it Confederation Day. Conservative Leader Diefenbaker asked sharply whether the cabinet had authorized also a change in name from Dominion Day.

Mr. Pearson did not reply and Mr. Diefenbaker later returned to the point, saying the statutes label July 1 Dominion Day.

Was the government "chiselling away" at Canada's heritage?

DIRTY WORD?

"I really can't answer such a picayune, chiselling question," Mr. Pearson replied.

"Is Dominion Day a dirty word now?" Mr. Diefenbaker retorted. There was no answer from the prime minister.

A formal announcement from the prime minister's office said the July 3 holiday was to mark "the centennial observance of Confederation Day," but did not elaborate.

July 1 is the 100th anniversary of Confederation.

A bill introduced by Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre) led to the exchange on names. The bill proposed that the name—whatever it is—be changed to Canada Day.

It also proposed that it be celebrated as it now is on July 1 except when that date is a Sunday. And in any year that July 1 falls on a Saturday, the following Monday would be set aside as the day off.

But Not Before Saturday

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—President Nasser of Egypt resigned as head of state today but in a statement issued 3½ hours later he said he would discuss his decision with the Egyptian National Assembly Saturday.

The second statement by Nasser said demonstrations in Cairo in support of him had "deeply moved me".

The statement indicated popular demonstrations in Cairo and other Arab capitals might have persuaded Nasser to go back on his decision to resign.

"I will go Saturday, God willing, to the National Assembly to debate with it, and before the people, the decision I have announced in my previous statement," Nasser's second announcement said.

It was read over Cairo radio by an announcer and monitored in Beirut.

"If I request anything of our struggling people at this time, it is that they wait until the morning," Nasser's statement said.

Men and women alike wept in the streets as they heard of the resignation of the man who was the most powerful and controversial Arab leader in modern history.

TOOK OVER IN '54

Nasser, who came to power in a 1954 coup, suggested in his dramatic speech that U.A.R. vice-president Zakaria Mohieddin replace him in the presidency.

Nasser, looking haggard, repeated his charges that the United States and Britain actively aided Israel in the Middle East war and claimed there was "no doubt" that aircraft from U.S. and British carriers in the Mediterranean had taken part.

"We had expected to be hit from the south and east," Nasser said, "but we were hit from the west."

(Both the United States and Britain have categorically denied Nasser's charges. The Israel defence ministry Thursday night said it had intercepted a phone conversation in which Nasser arranged to invent the charge of U.S. and British assistance to salvage his prestige. See story page 3.)

'GRAVE SETBACK'

Nasser, whose government accepted a UN cease-fire Thursday after a last ditch series of tank battles with the Israelis, near the Suez Canal, said he "could not hide the fact that Egypt had suffered a grave setback."

The Egyptian leader added:

Israel Denies New Cairo Raid

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—The Security Council today gave Israel and Syria two hours to end their resurgent fighting. The United Arab Republic reported meantime that Cairo was under air attack.

The Israeli delegation, however, officially denied that the cities of Cairo and Damascus had been bombed. The council agreed to meet again tonight.

Ambassador Mohamed Awad el Kony of the United Arab Republic brought the report of the raid on Cairo minutes after the council, in session all afternoon, adjourned until 6:30 p.m. EDT to await confirmation that both sides actually had stopped fighting in Syria.

All members of the council were summoned urgently to the office of president Hans R. Tabor of Denmark to decide on the body's next step.

El Kony's deputy, ambassador Amin Hilmy II, said the U.A.R. delegation received the report of Cairo's bombing by phone. He gave no further detail.

All fighting ceased on the main front along the Suez Canal after an Israeli army spokesman said Egyptians attacked east of the Suez Canal in the "central axis" and were repulsed. This presumably was in the area of Ismailia, Egyptian part in the centre of the canal.

Syria and Egypt, the last of the Arab combatants, accepted Thursday a UN Security Council demand for a ceasefire. Jordan, the third main Arab partner in the conflict, had dropped out of the war Wednesday.

Associated Press correspondent Hans Benedict, in the general area, saw the heavy artillery duel which broke the shaky ceasefire on the Syrian frontier this morning.

He said Syrian mortars in mid-morning opened fire on Israeli hilltop positions 20 miles north of the town of Tiberias, hours after Syria had announced acceptance of the ceasefire. The Israelis struck back and called in air attacks.

Radio Damascus, monitored in Israel, accused the Israelis of opening fire with artillery and aircraft and said: "We shelled their border settlements, demolished nine of their tanks, shot down one Mirage jet and destroyed a column of armor invading us."

'Raise White Flags Over Homes'

The Arab language Jerusalem (Israeli) radio called on the population of Syria to raise white flags over their homes, "keep away from Syrian soldiers and vehicles and overthrow" the leftwing socialist Baath ruling party in Damascus.

Israel considers Syria's present leaders who seized power in a 1966 coup as ultra-nationalists who have no understanding of the outside world and directly responsible for the current Mideast war.

Damascus radio interspersed its broadcasts with communique after communique claiming "heavy human and material losses" by the invading Israeli armies and exhorting the Syrians to fight on.

Syrian head-of-state Dr. Houreddin Attassi called on the Syrian people "to fight until death in the face of the foreign aggressors." He urged his people to "turn the world into an inferno in the face of the aggressors."

Speaking in an emotion-packed voice over Damascus radio, Attassi said the Syrian people are facing "a vile Anglo-American-Israeli plot to wip out the gains of our people."

Attassi said the existence o the Arab world is endangered by "imperialist aggression" and urged Syrian soldiers "to turn . . . Syrian soil into a graveyard for the aggressors."

Damascus radio announced that Syrian forces downed a Israeli plane over Damascus.

Thant Confirms Damascus Raids

At the United Nations Secretary-General Thant informed the Security Council that Israeli planes attacked Damascus and bombed, strafed and napalmed other targets in Syrian territory.

Quoting intelligence received at 12:30 p.m. EDT from Lt. Gen. Odd Bull of Norway, chief of the UN Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO) in Pales tine, Thant said that "at 140 hours, Greenwich Mean Tim (10:01 A.M. EDT), Damascus was having an air raid."

Thant gave the council running series of reports o military developments, startin with a bulletin he received a 7:14 a.m. EDT that Syri reported "in spite of ou acceptance of the cease-fire, w are being subjected to an Israel attack along the whole length o

JORDAN SAYS 15,000 DEAD IN FOUR DAYS

AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan said tonight 15,000 civilians and troops were kiled in the four-day war with Israel.

Foreign correspondents were called to Amman military hospital to see civilians and military personnel alleged to be suffering wounds caused by napalm dropped from Israeli planes.

A doctor said the Lutheran run Augusta Victorio Hospital in Jerusalem and a hospital in Amman were hit by Israeli bombs.

He also said Israelis strafed a field hospital convoy as returned to Amman and prevented it from picking u some 200 wounded on the way.

WRECKAGE IN THE DESERT . . . . . . TESTIMONY OF ISRAELI VICTORY

'Mopping Them Up With as Little Blood as Possible'

By CHARLES TAYLOR
Toronto Globe and Mail

TEL AVIV — Inside the border of the Gaza Strip abandoned observation towers are mute witnesses to the failure of Canadian and other members of the United Nations Emergency Force to keep peace between Israel and Egypt.

In a wide swath through the strip itself abandoned hulks of Egyptian tanks and trucks are fresher witnesses to the incredible and irresistible surge of the Israeli military spearhead at the star. of hostilities this week.

I travelled in the wake of the Israeli surge through the entire strip and further into Egypt. Everywhere victorious Israeli soldiers cheered and waved at the first foreign newsmen to record their remarkable exploit.

They swept through the strip in 36 hours, leaving sandy dunes littered with burned, smashed wrecks of Egyptian tanks, halftracks and trucks. Roads are covered with more wrecks, spent and live shells and bullets.

Past the strip and further inside Egypt heavy black smoke was rising from the town of El Arish as Israeli mortars were still lobbing shells into the town from its perimeter.

The Israeli offensive swept past El Arish leaving pockets of several hundred Egyptian snipers and other resisters. Said an Israeli colonel, "we're trying to mop them up with as much sweat and as little blood as possible."

Meanwhile the roads are choked with long convoys taking soldiers, guns and supplies farther into Egypt. Symbolically Israeli troops in trucks are munching large wheaten wafers called matzoth, which Jews eat at passover in memory of their exodus from Egypt 3,500 years ago.

"To Cairo, to Cairo," some shouted. Grimy and exultant they were all rejoicing in a victory as decisive as the Israeli surge into Sinai along the same route 11 years ago.

As they swept on they passed along truck columns bearing thousands of dejected forlorn Egyptian and Palestine liberation army captives.

At El Arish a young Israeli infantry captain said the Egyptians and Palestinians fought well and hard for the first hour or two. "Some even fought to the last minute but most turned and ran. It was disgusting. As always they left their guns and even their shoes," he added, pointing to piles of shoes.

Not only their shoes. While some Egyptian tanks were burned to a crisp others, dug into emplacements, were abandoned intact, nets still covering their unused cannon. The Egyptians also abandoned soft drink cans taken from withdrawing UNEF troops which they had no time to drink. Israeli troops were guzzling these drinks as they surged further into Egypt.

Other testimony to the rapid Israeli advance can be seen in the deserted huts crudely made of branches with pathetic white flags. Their Bedouin occupants had fled into the desert. Only here and

New Shop Centre Proposed For Lake Hill

A new shopping centre is being proposed in the Lake Hill district of Saanich.

Location is at Borden and McKenzie, to the north of the Reynolds Road Secondary School.

The application for rezoning was submitted by W. L. Wansborough who works for a local accounting company.

He would give few details except to say it will be for an independent food store.

"We just want the rezoning," he said.

It would also include a data processing computer centre.

The Saanich planning department is considering the application as well as a general plan for the area, which should be coming to council shortly.

New Holiday Called Confusion Day

The new Confederation Day holiday announced in Ottawa today could be termed Confusion Day here.

No one at the provincial or civic level knows yet whether the July 3 national holiday will result in an extra day off even for public servants let alone the public at large.

The problem arises because July 3 already has been selected as an unofficial holiday — the decision being taken by Victoria council only Thursday—for government employees.

The lead was given by the provincial cabinet sometime ago when it decided that because Dominion Day falls on a Saturday this year—and the federal legislation requires its observance that day — B.C.'s 19,000 provincial employees would be given Monday, July 3 off in lieu of Saturday when they're home anyway.

Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee this week recommended that all local municipal employees here be given the same treatment and it was expected that most employees in private firms would be given time off in lieu of July 1 or extra pay too.

But the surprise Ottawa announcement now poses the question of whether they also will get Tuesday off in lieu of July 3 to enlarge the long weekend to a super-long weekend.

Premier Bennett, Acting Provincial Secretary Kenneth Kiernan, Deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson and Civil Service Commission chairman Dr. Hugh Morrison—all the officials who might have a hand in the decision—were out of town today so nobody at the Legislative Buildings would hazard a guess at which way they may decide.

BY CABINET

"It will have to be decided by the cabinet," said Provincial Secretary Wesley Black, who was in town but in a convalescent bed at home following a post-session operation. "I can't adjudicate on that."

Assistant deputy labor minister C. R. Margison pointed out there is no legislation to act as a guide and "it's all a matter of collective agreements or city bylaws where they apply."

He said the old provisions listing compulsory closing days for manufacturing employees were eliminated in the general revision last session of the Factories Act and a new regulation specifying eight statutory holidays for almost all of B.C.'s 740,000 labor force doesn't go into effect until Aug. 1 and, in any event, doesn't provide for an extra holiday.

Greater Victoria municipalities no longer regulate general store and shop closing days although some have collective agreements which may define whether civic offices will have to close an extra day in lieu of the new holiday.

But both municipal officials and all company or union officials which have collective agrements will have to study the specific language of their contracts to find out if the Ottawa announcement dictates their action or whether management has the discretionary right to make its own decision.

Some contracts merely list the normal statutory holidays, while others also add wording to allow addition of any extra holidays proclaimed by any government level.

"In our case, we'll have to wait 10 days at least before we can make any decision because the council does not meet until the 19th," said Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox.
